The Laura Branigan Estate Auction

Saturday October 30, 2004, 11 AM

Preview: Day of Sale 9-11AM
also on-line at www.opmauctions.com

Laura Branigan was born July 3, 1957 in Brewster, NY and grew up in Armonk, NY outside New York City. After attending The Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York City in the late 70's, she performed as a back-up singer for Leonard Cohen, and toured with him throughout Europe. When she returned, she was determined to have her own solo career. Her talent, four-octave vocal range and unique style caught the attention of Atlantic Records, who signed a recording contract with her, setting the stage for her meteoric rise to stardom.

In 1982, the release of the single "Gloria" thrust Branigan into the popular consciousness, rising to the top of the Billboard Charts and staying there for an unbelievable 36 weeks. She received the Grammy nomination for best pop female vocalist for "Gloria" and it became her signature song. Laura's stature as a major vocalist was secured with two additional top ten releases: "Solitaire" and "How Am I Supposed To Live Without You."

Ms. Branigan's career continued to skyrocket in 1983 with the Grammy-nominated song "Imagination" from the movie Flashdance and her unforgettable performance of "The Lucky One" which received the Grand Prize at the 13th Tokyo Music Festival. In 1984, the title track of her album Self Control rose to the Number 2 position of the Top Ten Charts. Her popularity continued through the '80s and '90s with additional hits such as "Spanish Eddie" and "The Power Of Love," soundtrack performances for the films Ghostbusters, Body Rock, Coming To America, and Salsa, and the albums Laura Branigan, Over My Heart, The Best of Branigan and Back In Control.

In addition to her stellar recording career, Branigan performed as an actor in the television show CHiPs, the films Mugsy's Girls and Backstage, and on stage in the New York musical Love, Janis.

Out of the spotlight, Branigan was a fine chef and had an extensive cookbook library. She loved creating her own recipes and was putting the finishing touches on a cookbook of her own this year.

Sadly, that project as well as a much-anticipated new album release were halted by her untimely death on August 26 of a brain aneurysm.

This great talent and wonderful human being will be missed by her fans, friends, and family but through her music she will be forever with us all.

OPM Auctions is privileged to offer the Estate of Laura Branigan.

Among the items available:

- Ms. Branigan's costumes and clothing
- Gold Records
- Early unpublished cassette tapes
- Hand-written music and scores
- Her guitar
- Her wedding dress and wedding album photos
- Furniture and art
- Decorative accessories
- Cookbook collection and more.

Duck Talks

Plan To Move The Big Duck To Islip Airport Ruffles His Feathers

By Dan Rattiner

Some marketing people at the Islip Airport, proud of the brand new terminal just built there, have proposed that the Big Duck, the famous tourist attraction on the East End, be moved to a prominent location in the entryway of the new terminal, so the 300,000 or so aircraft passengers who come in and out of that airport every year can look the Big Duck over admiringly as they pause briefly in their walk to the check-in counters.

As a result of this proposal, a druggist in Southold, John Kramer, is asking local residents to join him in forming the Big Duck Militia. It will be an action group that could answer a clarion call or quack in the middle of the night if the Islipians are coming, muster on the town green in Flanders where the Big Duck is, and march to the duck and form a human chain around it. Kramer is also looking for people with private planes who could be scrambled from East Hampton and Montauk to fly up and drop things from the air on the kidnappers.

"The Big Duck is an East End landmark, and there aren't too many of them left. We intend to drop flour bombs or potatoes on any intruders from the west," Kramer said.

The Big Duck was built of wood and concrete in 1931 by a Long Island duck farmer in Flanders as a unique farm stand from within which he could sell fresh roasted duck and fresh chickens and eggs. The body of the duck is twelve feet high, ten feet wide, and the duck's head and bill rise up eighteen feet. The farmer made the Big Duck's eyes out of red Model T Ford taillights. They light up at night.

Le canard grand

I thought I ought to interview the Big Duck and ask him what he thinks of all this.

Dan: This is a big fuss they are making over you.

Duck: Yeah.

Dan: Do you want to move to Islip?

Duck: Absolutely not. You know, I've thought about it. I've never been to Islip. Anywhere else for that matter. But I do read about far-away places. Especially at night. So I know what Islip is all about.

Dan: What's it about?

Duck: It's a suburb. It has strip malls. Shopping centers. Traffic lights. The airport. The most famous thing people know about

Islip is about the Islip Garbage Barge that went around the world ten years ago.

Dan: Refresh my memory.

Duck: They had all this municipal garbage, all the toxic stuff I think they had separated from twenty years of people dumping the garbage there, and they put it on a barge in their harbor, and they had this deal with someplace else that agreed to take it and the barge left Islip, towed by a tugboat and while it was out in the Atlantic, the deal fell through. So they towed it to the west coast, and then China and India and all the way around the world trying to find a port for it. And they were turned away everywhere. It was like the story of the freighter St. Louis that left Europe with people fleeing the Holocaust. The Captain couldn't find a port in America that would take them in and they finally gave up.

Dan: You read that?

Duck: Good book. So that's what I know about Islip. That and I think Joey Buttafuoco and Amy Fisher lived there. No. I don't want to go there. Sounds awful.

Dan: You HAVE traveled a little bit. A little bit.

Duck: That's true. Mr. Mauer built me right here on Route 24 all those years ago so people driving from Hampton Bays to Riverhead or the other way around would have to go by me. I really miss Mr. Mauer. He was a really nice man. But after he died, developers bought the farm and filed plans to subdivide it into houses. So Suffolk County bought me to save me.

And they moved me four miles down the road to their Sears Bellows Park here, and set me up again right on the Flanders Road, but four miles away, at the entrance to the park. Kids come here for the pony rides. Parents bring their kids here to play. At Christmas, kids put wreaths and Christmas lights on me and sing Christmas carols. And I get some visitors that come inside to get park brochures and stuff.

Dan: Now they want to move you back to the Mauer property.

Duck: Well, that's a good idea. I know the developers plans fell through and the land has been preserved and that would be a great memorial to Mr. Mauer. I'd be for that. It's not too far.

Dan: Is it hard to move?

Duck: It's a big deal. They have to jack me up a few feet and put a trailer under me. Then they have to tow me very carefully and very slowly. It was wonderful when they did that. They had a marching band, and dignitaries and kids and everything.

Dan: They could do it again for Islip.

Duck: All the way to Islip? Look. Four miles is one thing. They had to take down electric wires and stuff. But sixty miles? I'd never make it. They'd have to take down thousands of wires. I'd get electrocuted. I know it. Absolutely.

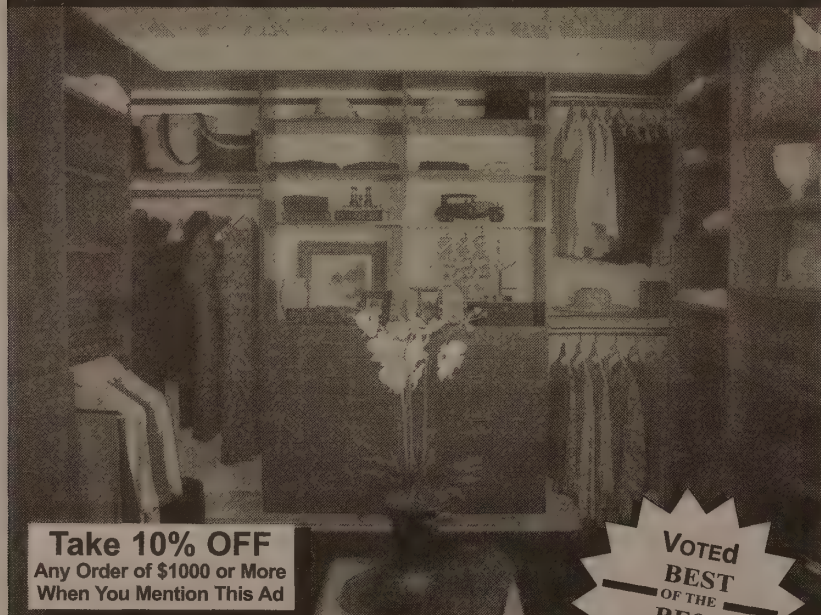

Dan: What if you flew? They do have an airport there.

Duck: Look. These wings are glued to my sides. You think Mr. Mauer would have built me to be able to fly away? Of course not. I can't fly. And you know, I read where they say that if they took me to Islip, 300,000 people a year would see me. I'd be in a glass case or something. About 300,000 people a DAY drive by where I am here on Route 24. Look, there's the Big Duck! And they can stop and go inside. Once they had this little mini-radio station broadcasting. You could hear it over your car radio about 500 yards up the road in either direction. And they played a recording. It was made by supermodel Christie Brinkley, who lives near here. Can you imagine that? She told about Mr. Mauer and everything and everybody. It was so beautiful, and she is so pretty. It almost made me cry. I was built here on farmland — there is still plenty of farmland around — and that's the idea — I'm an attraction that people come to, to experience some of the farmer stuff that goes on around here.

Dan: The Islip people say you are very out-of-the-way. You should be at the center of

East End Real Estate: How It Happened, The Impact It Has Had

By Dan Rattiner

There's people up in Springs who paid $50 for a building lot and sold it ten years later for $500 and thought they made a killing who are now crying in their beer to see the same lots selling for $5,000. — Dan's Papers, July 1969

Who knew what was gonna happen after that? Well, nobody knew really, but a whole lot of people took a guess on the real estate market and are walking around all smug and proud of themselves today. It's one of the outcomes of having vacant one-acre building lots inland here in the Hamptons going for half a million dollars or more, minimum. All these smug people. Smarter than everybody else. Driving Hummers and the like. Revered elders who only have one piece of good advice for their now grown children starting out.

Buy real estate. You won't be sorry.

But there have been other outcomes. And it is not just in the Hamptons. In certain communities around the country where people yearn to live, for whatever reason — because of the scenery, the beaches, the mountains, whatever, real estate prices have spun wildly into the stratosphere.

In those places, demand has exceeded supply. And the bidding has gone up and up and up. But I really don't have to tell you that. You know about it deep down in your soul, because you either rode the years to great wealth, or you had to call it a day in these communities because you couldn't afford to stay there. It has affected almost every aspect of everybody's life.

The change began around twenty years ago. Before that time, there was a sort of rule of thumb. In exclusive parts of town, you had to be pretty rich to be able to afford it. In the rest of town, prices were within reach for the middle class and even the working class. There was a relationship between annual income and

SALLY KELLERMAN: FILM FESTIVAL JUDGE

By Dan Rattiner

Academy Award-winner Sally Kellerman stars in a film being shown this weekend here at the Hamptons International Film Festival.

"I play a drunken realtor in Los Angeles," she told me. "The movie is Open House by Dan Mirvish. It's an inventive film."

But Sally is also going to be a judge at the film festival.

"Have you ever been a judge before?" I asked.

"I've always had plenty of opinions, but I've never done this before, no."

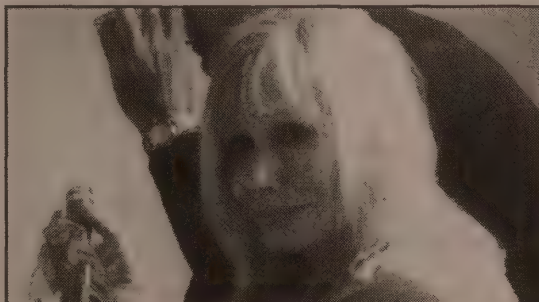

"Any ideas?"

"They'll tell me what to do when the time comes. But I'm really looking forward to the final judging. I love watching movies. I had dinner with Robert Altman and his wife the other day and they told me this is an excellent festival, and to do it."

"It is."

Sally Kellerman is perhaps best known for her performance in the movie *M*A*S*H*. She played Hot Lips. I mentioned that she'll probably run into Alan Alda during the festival, as he either participates in it or goes to it. He lives in nearby Mecox.

"What movies were the most fun to make?" I asked.

"A bunch. I had a great time making Slither with James Caan in California some years ago. And I had a great time in Paris where I acted in A Little Romance, directed by George Roy Hill. I worked with Sir Laurence Olivier. It was also great fun making Back to School with Rodney Dangerfield. I was his love interest."

"Anything upcoming?"

"I'm in Boynton Beach Bereavement, which will be out in November," she said.

Up

housing costs. And there was a rule of thumb for renting. The cost of a rental had to bring in, on an annual basis, one tenth of the value of a house. That way, mortgages and improvements and repairs could be paid for by the landlord successfully. It also meant that a wealthy person might spend an amount equal to the average wage of a local person just to rent a nice house for three months in the summertime. Seemed a bit ridiculous, but if you had the money, that was how it worked. This rule of thumb probably still works for the regular real estate market. The problem is that there practically IS no regular real estate market.

For example, a house on the beach in Southampton rented for $300,000 for the month of August this year. That's $10,000 a DAY. Nobody in their right mind rents a house for that amount of money. Except the super-rich. And so here they are. The renter was the 19-year-old daughter of a Russian oil company executive, and the owner of the property was a noted songwriter and wealthy divorcee. Nobody blinked.

Since 1980, four things have happened. First of all, the gap between rich and poor has widened. Second, there got to be a lot more super-rich people in America. Third, the Hamptons, along with about a dozen other major locations, became where the super-rich wanted to be. So the prices for homes in these areas went sky high because there were not enough of them to go around. As a result, a high percentage of the homes in the community simply lifted up and out of this one-in-ten rule of thumb, and then that just spread to almost every nook and cranny of the Hamptons. And today, people buy and sell homes as they might any commodity — diamonds, gold, copper, antique sports cars — in the belief that what they pay for them will be a lot less than what they can sell them for.

This has led to another extraordinary phenomenon. In at least four cases that I know of, a mansion was built on a parcel of land in the Hamptons, put up for sale, traded up and up, then torn down to construct an even bigger house, without anybody ever having lived in the first one.

And the real estate boom is not done, to judge by some other desirable places. In Palm Beach, the prices are even higher than they are here. In San Francisco, in desirable neighborhoods, when you put your house on the market, what you ask for your house is just the base. The bidding starts. It goes higher, until finally the last person drops out.

Benchmark property sales have been $35 million for a house sold by singer Billy Joel to comedian Jerry Seinfeld in East Hampton, and $29 million for the oceanfront home of real estate developer Francesco Galesi in Southampton to designer Calvin Klein. I know people who bought their oceanfront homes for $500,000, sold them ten years later for $2 million, and are now crying in their beer to see them sold for $20 million.

The social consequences of all this have been enormous, of course. The once thriving middle class is either moved out or playing their own form of the real estate market, still living here while the value of their property goes up and up without their doing anything about it yet.

The working class cannot afford to live here, unless they open their own businesses. Enterprising members of this class, former laborers, can make out very well by taking advantage of new opportunities that present themselves. New pool maintenance, landscaping and building companies have thrived in this situation. Working class people can also make a good wage if they have skills that have brought them a license. Individual plumbers and electricians continue to be in great de-

HYBRID MORTGAGES: A RISING STAR

In the field of home financing, "hybrid" mortgages are rapidly growing in popularity with homebuyers. In today's market of rising interest rates, it's a mortgage product that's available at a very low rate, and for several years that rate is fixed. It saves money, provides a period of fixed-rate security, and helps some buyers qualify for financing.

Brief description: Hybrid mortgage loans offer a fixed-rate for several years - usually 5 to 7 years - then reverts to an adjustable rate mortgage (ARM) for the remainder of its term. The interest rate is significantly lower than a 30-year fixed-rate loan, yet the borrower has the assurance the rate will not change for a period of years.

Other special types of mortgages now available include an ARM loan that includes a provision that allows it to be converted to a fixed-rate loan when that's a practical step for the borrower. Still others take an interest-only mortgage, usually for a specified number of years. It then reverts to an amortized loan with interest and principal payments each month.

New York Mortgage Center - from Manhattan to Montauk, we are the area's #1 Broker. If you go anywhere else for a mortgage, you are paying too much.

Maybe What America Needs Is A King Just Ask Them In Phnom Penh

By Dan Rattiner

In the middle of this political season, when two men are competing to become President of the United States with a ferocity for the job not seen in a generation, it is refreshing to note the latest developments in Cambodia.

Cambodia has a King. Not a ceremonial King who is just a figurehead, but a real king who wears a crown and sits on a throne, and though he has to share his power with various prime ministers, parliaments and local governors, has plenty of power nevertheless.

And he has just announced that he is abdicating. "I am now very tired of being King," he wrote to the Prime Minister.

King Norodom Sihanouk certainly has been doing this long enough. Every morning except for one stretch when he was put under house arrest, and another when he went into exile with the royal entourage for awhile, he has gotten up in the morning, had servants help him put on his royal robes, gone to the throne room, been handed the scepter, and sat down. He's very revered by the residents of his country. When he speaks, people listen. They have to listen. There is a royal edict that whenever the King says he wants something, or says there is a new rule from now on, his subjects must obey what he says or be punished.

Therefore, what's very much liked about him is how circumspect he has been in what he says. He's been King for sixty years. He is known to be very careful about saying anything that might be misunderstood, or that might put his subjects in some sort of compromising position, and everybody has appreciated that. Mostly he has just let his parliament and prime minister run things, only stepping in to threaten to pass an edict, which generally gets things going his way.

There have been, of course, hard times during the King's reign. Very hard times. When the Vietnam War broke out in the country next door, he spoke a great deal about how, on the one

J.P. DAVIS RETURNS TO SAG HARBOR WITH A FILM

By Dan Rattiner

When J. P. Davis was twenty-one years old, his father, Jerry Mallow, set aside an evening at the Sag Harbor Theatre so that his young son could perform a monologue he had written.

"It helps when your dad owns the theatre," J. P. told me. "It was called Dreamer Awaken. I was home from college and I wrote it and patterned it on the sort of monologues that Spalding Grey used to do. He lived in Sag Harbor. I even met him one time, and I thanked him for being an influence on me. Though it was unbeknownst to him, at the time."

About 300 people attended the performance, friends, family and regular theatre goers who came to see this young hot shot. Some of them knew of the family connection, some did not. It was a big success.

Now it is thirteen years later, and J. P. is returning to Sag Harbor from Hollywood, where he has lived for the last twelve years, accompanying a film he has written, co-produced and starred in, which, with high praise, has been selected by the Hamptons International Film Festival, and is one of the favorites to win the Golden Starfish Award. And you don't have to guess where it is getting its New York premiere.

"Dad's theatre," J. P. said.

You can see it there this Friday night. It is called FIGHTING TOMMY RILEY, and it is about the sagging careers of two men, boxer Tommy Riley, played by J. P., and aging fight trainer Marty Goldberg, played by the well-known character actor Eddie Jones. Each becomes a booster of the other. And in the end, both win.

I mention that this is the New York premiere of this film because last June, it was entered into the Los Angeles Film Festival. It was selected and shown there to excellent reviews.

"And what has come of that is a distribution contract," J. P. told me. "We are announcing it hand this and on the other hand that, all of it in the hopes of keeping his countrymen clear of the conflict. When it escalated — the incursions into Cambodia by the North Vietnamese and the response by the Americans to bomb them anyway — he took the advice of his prime minister and sought safety in Europe for a while.

A few years later, after the war ended, he returned, only to be put under house arrest by the murderous Pol Pot, whose band of Khmer Rouge roughnecks had seized the nation and started cleansing the cities by forcing the residents to flee to the countryside. The King and the Royal Family were under house arrest for six years. They had no staff. And for food, they were reduced to planting and tending a garden on the palace grounds. Though their captors did bring them fish and rice twice a week. On the other hand, Sihanouk was still the King.

It turns out that there is no procedure in Cambodia regarding what to do if the King abdicates. Why would a King abdicate? The Parliament now has rushed through a law allowing that the King can choose one of his sons to be the new King. And Sihanouk has responded by making a very unexpected choice.

Cambodia

The son that most people thought would become the King was the King's most ambitious son, Prince Norodom Ranariddh. Instead, the King, with the backing of the current Prime Minister, has chosen another son, Prince Norodom Sihamoni, who has not lived in Cambodia in twenty years. Sihamoni is a ballet dancer — he first performed the lead role in the ballet "The Little Prince" at court with one of his sisters when he was 12 years old — and after going to a classical Cambodian ballet institute, went to Prague where he got a degree in 1975 from the Academy of Music and Art there, and then moved to France where he became a professor at several different ballet conservatories. He is currently the founder and driving force of Ballet Deva, a company that tours and performs ballets that he choreographs.

At first, when told his father wanted him to be the new King, he said no, but after awhile he came around.

Cambodians seemed confused at the King's choice at first. But then, they always do what the King says. And they were already dealing with something new, with the King's guidance, which was to accept his announcement of abdication.

But now the Cambodians are rallying around the decision. Prince Ranariddh, who heads up the National Assembly, has endorsed the choice.

Some analysts say that the King chose the self-effacing Prince Sihamoni primarily because he has not been in the country, and so has not been involved in all the politics and machinations that have gone on. But they also say the King acted as he did in order to respect his current wife, Queen Norodom Monineath. Sihamoni is her last surviving son, and by crowning him King, he assures her well being if he is no longer around. Cambodians carry the names not only of their fathers, but their mothers too.

"Prince Sihamoni's character is incomparable with anybody else with royal blood," wrote a newspaperman in Phnomh Phen, "because of his compassion and his love and his care. He is very, very, very intelligent and pure because he has not married, and he satisfies everything needed by his parents and his brothers, and he never says bad things or does bad things in his life."

President Bush, explaining why he invaded Iraq, said that all peoples all over the world will embrace democracy and freedom when it is presented to them. But I'm not so sure. Maybe what we need here in America, in addition to the politicians, is a King. Kerry says Bush is unfit to lead the country. Bush says Kerry is unfit to lead the country. When one of them wins, who is going to be on hand to step in and issue an edict that must be obeyed to straighten everything out?

Reports Of The Demise Of The 106th Airborne Rescue Are Premature

By Jerry Cimisi

There has been a lot of understandable emotion concerning the news that the 106th Wing of the Air National Guard, a superb search and rescue unit, will be under review for possible closure or relocation. The 106th is stationed at Gabreski Airport in Westhampton; it has been involved putting out the Sunrise Fires of 95, searching for survivors of TWA Flight 800 in 96, and in recovery efforts at the World Trade Center. It has rescued people in storm-tossed seas. The East End community takes a lot of pride in the Guard's presence.

The facts about this review are poorly or only partially understood. First, there is the concept that the 106th is on some kind of list, singling it out, along with some others, from the aggregate of military bases around the county. The truth is, all bases are under review, in a process called BRAC: Base Realignment and Closure.

The law for this process was passed in 1988, in the latter days of the Cold War. Over the decades of tensions with the Soviet Union, the Reagan was in favor of this.)

In 1991, 93 and 95 there were BRAC reviews that resulted in the closure of hundreds of bases; in 1993 there were 175 bases closed, and in 1995, 146 were closed.

There seemed common sense to this. After the large-scale military build-up of the Gulf War in the first half of 1991, there did not seem to be any huge military threat on the horizon.

And then, of course, came September 11, 2001, the invasion of Afghanistan and Iraq and continual elevated terror threats around the country.

Congressman Tim Bishop said, "We ought to not be closing down any bases without a true assessment of our needs, which obviously 9/11 and what has happened afterward, have influenced. There have been votes in the House to delay the BRAC process for two years, and I voted to do military had grown. There had been valleys as well as peaks of growth during these decades, but on the verge of the 1990s it was decided that the military should be scaled back. (Apparently the very pro-military Ronald that, but the measure did not pass the Senate. And it appears the President wants to go ahead with this process."

Bishop said that currently, all military bases are sending the Department of Defense the information it has requested. In March, 2005 a BRAC review committee will be chosen. "In July, the DOD makes its recommendation to the committee. The committee makes its recommendations to the president in September."

The president has the discretion of changing the list, saving a base from closure or reassignment, Bishop said. "But when he presents the list to Congress, the whole list has to be voted on, accepted or rejected." In other words, the House or the Senate cannot remove or add bases to the list; they have to decide on the whole package.

One event that may have given some confusion to the matter of the 106th being considered for closure is the recent allocation in the Defense Department budget of $990,000 towards a new pararescue facility at the Westhampton base. If there is a possibility the base will be closed, why would the DOD do this?

Congressman Bishop explained, "We worked very hard with the defense appropriations committee to get this facility. It is in the budget for fiscal year 2005, which began October 1. I was acting on a request from Colonel Canders, the commander of the 106th. This facility will provide better space for pararescue training and mission planning, also for storing equipment. I doubt that construction will begin before next summer, but the fact that this is in the budget can only make the base more attractive to the DOD."

At the culmination of the last BRAC process in 1995, Kenneth H. Bacon, Assistant Secretary of Defense, said in a press conference that the priority in assessing bases is "military value." That year, the Deputy Secretary of Defense, John Deutch, who would soon be appointed head of the CIA, chaired the BRAC Review Committee. (He is now a professor of chemistry at MIT.)

Bacon also said, "It's been a painful process for the communities involved, but if it is necessary...that is why we are doing it."

It costs money to close down a base: $7 billion for the 175 bases closed in 1993, and $3.8 billion for the 146 closed in 1995. There are also environmental cleanup costs. But the DOD figured — in 1995 — that by 2001 (yes, ironic) that what it would save in having fewer bases would have balanced out the cleanup costs.

Incidentally, the DOD did not figure environmental cleanup costs into the above figures — because, as it was put, they could not be known until a base was closed. And there would be bases that would need environmental cleanups while still in operation.

There is also a loss of jobs. In 1993, New York State lost 3,000 jobs related BRAC closures; in 1995 it lost 1,400.

Blake Zeff, a spokesman for Senator Charles Schumer, said, "The base is a vital part of the local economy and we will fight tooth and nail to keep it open. People shop in the stores around the base, go to restaurants surrounding the base, and it provides jobs to a number of local residents."

The Air National Guard has been at Gabreski Airport since 1970. (It leases its space from the county.) Prior to that the Guard was at Floyd Bennett Field in Brooklyn.

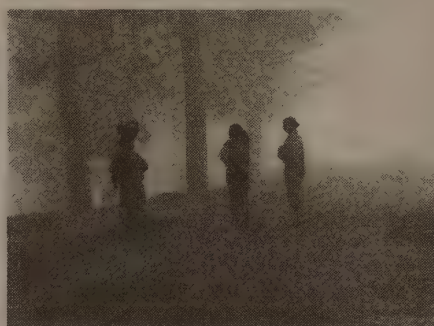

What would later become the Guard had its beginnings in 1908, when the New York National Guard was formed by early flying enthusiasts. It financed its first aircraft with $500 in 1910 — though the plane would crash later that year. The Guard was subsequently loaned an aircraft by the Curtiss Aeroplane Company in 1911.

The 1st Aero Company, Signal Corps, NY National Guard was established in November 1915. It was federalized in July, 1916 to pursue Pancho Villa in northern Mexico.

With the U.S. entering WWI, all National Guard aviation units were dissolved, though in 1921, World War I veterans and other aviation enthusiasts reestablished an aviation unit in New York at Miller Field, on Staten Island. When the United States entered World War II, the 102nd Observation Squadron was again activated for Federal service. It flew coastal defense missions along the eastern seaboard and the Gulf of Mexico.

The modern duties of the 106th include rescuing those in distress at sea and providing an emergency landing port for the Space Shuttle (or recovery) if it is forced down. Following the Gulf War, the 106th has also provided aircraft and personnel for operations in Turkey, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. It has taken part in rescue missions in Iraq. Currently, the 106th is the sole Air Force rescue organization in the northeast.

John Schneider, Communications Director for Congressman Tim Bishop, said, "The last survivor at Ground Zero was rescued by members of the 106th. I don't know what could more speak to the effectiveness of the 106th than that."

LIU's Plan To Describe College's Future In October Is Postponed

By David Stoll

For quite some time, any questions about Southampton College were addressed to the public relations department at C. W. Post. This was troubling, because LIU is still considering what will happen to the marine and environmental sciences program. It was also frustrating because the C. W. Post representatives did not seem to have any understanding of why East End folks are so passionate about the closing of Southampton College, nor did they seem to have any compassion for the people here whose lives are being so disrupted. But recently, LIU appointed someone highly experienced in public relations, Pekka Paavronpera, to handle PR for Southampton College, from Southampton College. Did this event foretell good news about marine and environmental sciences? Or did LIU simply decide that the C. W. Post PR department was unable to fend off a barrage of bad press on the East End?

It has frequently been reported in the press that LIU would make a decision about the future of the marine and environmental sciences program during its upcoming October meeting of the Board of Trustees. According to Mr. Paavronpera, however, that was a "rumor," as "nothing definite has been decided." He ex-

NEW TWISTS AT THE PELOSI MURDER TRIAL

By David Stoll

The murder trial of Daniel Pelosi has begun. In opening statements, prosecutor Jane Albertson contended that Pelosi killed Ted Ammon over money, using his knowledge of the security system he had installed to gain access to the house. She said that Pelosi was angry about a proposed divorce settlement between Ammon and his estranged wife, Generosa, in which she would receive $25 million from a man worth hundreds of millions. Albertson also said that Pelosi asked his father on the day after the murder how he could get rid of something so that it couldn't be found. She promised that various family members, friends and former lovers of Pelosi would testify that he told them that he was planning to, and did, kill Ammon.

But defense attorney Gerald Shargel said that Pelosi was on his way to Center Moriches the night of the killing, and that blood and a pubic hair (now missing) found at the scene did not belong to Ammon or Pelosi. He raised the possibility that Ammon was killed by a gay man picked up at a nearby gay beach, suggesting that the killer took Ammon's sheets because he was worried about being identified through his semen.

Before opening statements, Judge Doyle ruled that several inmates to whom Pelosi spoke about the murder may testify. Also, another tape has surfaced — this time a video tape of Pelosi's fiancée passing money to the inmate whom Pelosi promised to pay to knock out the teeth of inmates who are cooperating with the prosecution, at a rate of "$100 per tooth." This videotape was part of the evidence presented to the grand jury that indicted Pelosi on 16 new counts, including attempted assault and witness tampering, just before the trial.

Several witnesses have already testified, including an Ammon associate and Ammon's chauffeur (who wept) about finding the body, and the East Hampton Village police sergeant who arrived at the scene. Both the chauffeur and the sergeant testified that they fed the dogs, the chauffeur testified that he removed Ammon's cell phone from the crime scene, and the officer testified that he rolled the body slightly to look for a weapon underneath (none was found). Shargel suggested that doing so was not proper procedure for evidence preservation. Ammon's sister also testified, saying that Ammon was in a good mood the day of the murder and that he told her he planned to take a walk on the beach with his three dogs to clear his head. Ammon's former assistant testified that Ammon showed no indication of being bisexual, but she admitted that she was not familiar with his personal life. The jurors have been shown a 34-minute video of the crime scene and a made-to-scale model of the second floor of Ammon's house, including a paper cutout of the body.

plained that discussions are ongoing "with various bodies that have expressed interest in program." Mr. Paavronpera emphasized that the October meeting would cover a broad agenda about LIU as a whole, as this is the main meeting of the year. While issues relating to Southampton College will be on agenda, "no major decisions are expected." Mr. Paavronpera assured that "as soon as there is something to say, there will be an announcement."

As to Mr. Paavronpera's role, he explained that he will "facilitate communications, both internally and externally," for Southampton College. While this reporter is pleased to have someone in Southampton to call, the "internal" role is really the more important. A friendly man, Mr. Paavronpera can act as an information resource for the many people who are being disrupted by the closing of the undergraduate program. As readers of this paper know, LIU handled both the announcement of its decision to close Southampton College and the ongoing implementation of that decision horribly. Hopefully, Mr. Paavronpera can make the transition easier by providing clear and consistent information to students, faculty and staff — that is the least LIU can do. But given his employer's track record so far, his job is not one to be envied.

By Emily J Weitz

Actor, director, voice of a cartoon character, playing himself – Tim Daly has taken on the screen from every angle. Most well-known as straight-laced Joe Hackett on “Wings,” and also as the voice of the animated Superman, Tim Daly shows his versatility by stepping into a very different role in the film Bereft, screening this week at the Hamptons International Film Festival. Daly acts in the film, as well as producing and directing.

But contrary to popular belief, Daly didn't always see his future in theatre and film. He was born in New York City and raised in Suffern, NY. Both of his parents were actors, so he was always exposed to the possibilities of the silver screen. However, he was never too impressed with their dinner parties, as the whole crowd struck him as a bunch of “drunken grown-ups.”

Still, he always had the dramatic bug growing inside him. He had an overactive imagination and, coupled with his short attention span, the ever-changing roles of an actor could hold his interest. As a child, Daly wanted to be everything: a fireman, a doctor, a teacher, a student... But he didn't want to devote his whole life to any one of those endeavors. He preferred to pretend to be each one of them for a day or six months, and then throw himself into another role. Whether he liked it or not, a call to acting whispered on the distant horizon.

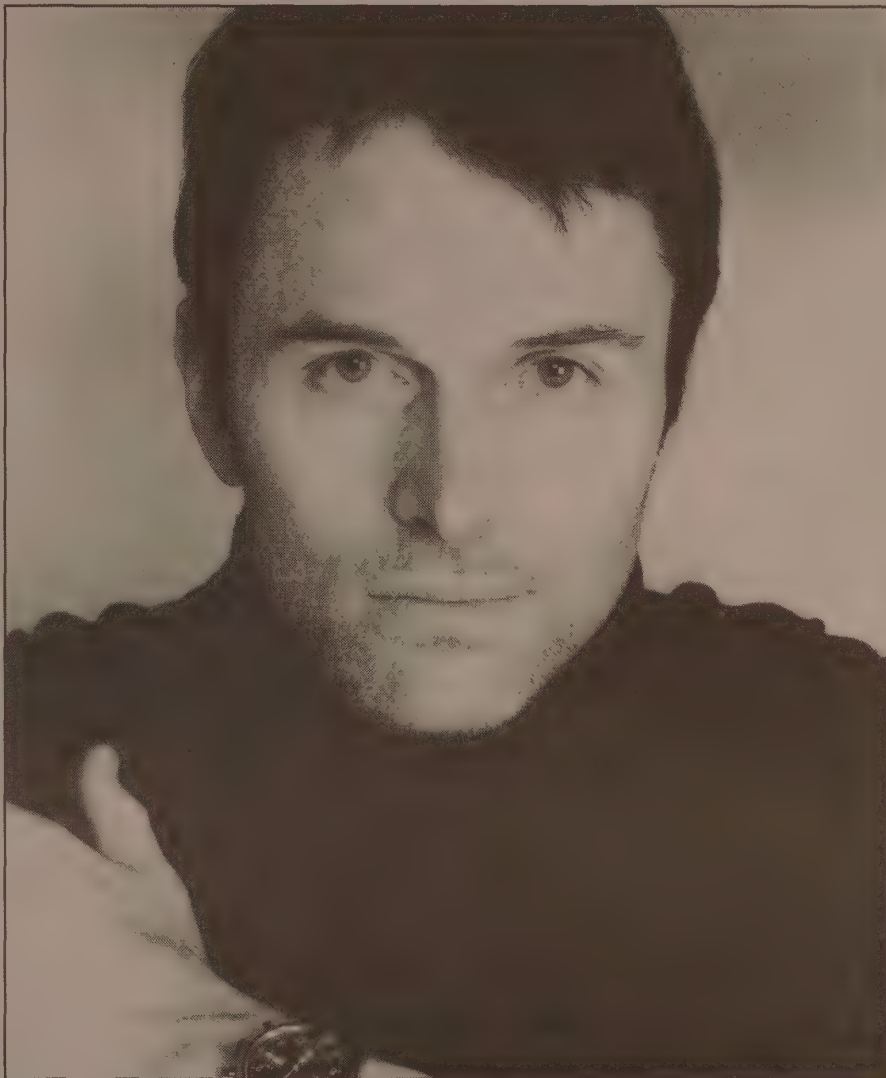

Daly went to the Putney School, a private school in Vermont. After high school, he spent a few years fueling his wanderlust by driving cross-country, working odd jobs for short stints. He compared this part of his life to Kerouac's On The Road, a period in which “our battered suitcases were piled on the sidewalk. We had longer ways to go. But no matter, the road is life.” –Kerouac, p. 211

This part of his life has added to his ability to capture the essence of characters because he was able to step out of the familiar and see real people working menial jobs, living from paycheck to paycheck. Bits and pieces of people he met on his journey have inspired him in future roles. He worked in hands-on jobs that weren't necessarily his passion, and by the time he was ready to return to Vermont, he embraced the life in which his job could be his passion. He considers himself lucky to be one of the few people who truly loves his career.

Daly attended Bennington College in Vermont, where he majored in Drama.

He landed his first professional role while still in college, in a summerstock production of

Who's Here

Timothy Daly Actor, Director, Producer

“Equus.” After graduation, he headed down to New York City to pursue acting and singing, and only a year later, in 1982, he was cast as ed between 17 and 40 years old. There were constant costume and makeup changes, and his energy and adaptability were challenged.

More recently, Daly has gotten involved with producing and directing as well. He has worked with partner Clark Mathis on several movies, including Bereft and Edge of America, both of which are here at the Hamptons International Film Festival. Mathis and Daly met working on a television version of “The Fugitive” a few years ago and discovered their compatibility. Daly needed some help directing Bereft since he was also acting in the film, and he trusted Mathis because they have the same aesthetic values and a complimentary set of skills. Their joint endeavors have arisen from their shared philosophy of finding a writer they like, and then asking them, “What do they have that they loved that they couldn't get made?” And then they do whatever they can to get it made.

Edge of America is a great story that reaches out to a spectrum of audiences. A college professor would be intrigued by the cultural implications of a black high school teacher leaving his Texas home to teach on a Native American reservation. The film explores the concept of a minority becoming a minority among minorities. At the same time, Edge of America can be viewed simply as an exciting sports story, accessible to all audiences.

Bereft is Daly's favorite piece that he's been involved with. He found it wholly consuming since he saw it from behind and in front of the camera. The film achieved what he had hoped it would – a unique, artistic performance that still manages to hold the attention of the audience in an entertaining way. When Daly first saw the screenplay for Bereft, he was blown away by the “fantastic writing” of Peter Ferlund. He was intrigued by the story. The goal of the film is to express “what happens when powerful emotions go unexpressed.” He believes that this movie has the ability to affect people because we all know the profundity of the loss of a loved one, and we deal with it in different ways. “Too many people,” Daly says, “deal with it by not dealing with it at all.”

Peter Ferlund, the writer, and Tim Daly both live in Vermont. They were sitting in Daly's living room about 7 years ago when Daly told Ferlund to “write a movie we can make in Vermont cheap, and I'll produce it.” The screenplay began with two characters, Happy and Dennis, who came to take a backseat when the Bereft* is Daly's favorite piece that he's been involved with. He found it wholly consuming ...

Billy in the movie Diner.

Daly's favorite television role surfaced in 1988, when he starred in “Almost Grown,” David Chase's (“The Sopranos”) first TV show. Daly had to exercise his versatility in this role, as he played one character whose age fluctuat-protagonist of the film, Molly, was created later in the development. Ferlund was on the set the whole time the movie was being filmed, and his thoughts and ideas were valued and honored. This allowed the film to be true to the original screenplay.

Right now, Tim Daly has returned to the small screen. He is working on a TV series for ABC called "Eyes." The show is based on a high-end detective agency called Risk Management. Daly plays a wise-ass with "a dubious set of values," and he's enjoying the part, particularly the fancy suits he gets to don.

Looking ahead, Daly would like to get back into theatre, but first he'll have to see how the new television series goes.

Of all the caps Daly's worn, his favorite is still the acting cap. Acting is his first love. He will always take the opportunity to become someone other than himself. "Whatever medium you're working in," he says, "acting allows you to walk in someone else's shoes." While you often bring an element of yourself into the character, Daly likes to disappear if he can. He tries to immerse himself in a completely different character, assuming a new identity and perspective. It seems he's achieved the perfect role for someone with a lot of imagination and a short attention span.

Tim Daly has only passed through the East End before, but we welcome him here this autumn weekend for the Hamptons International Film Festival, where the artistic and cultural face of the Hamptons will be shining.

The day laboring class now makes less money an hour than ever before. This is a consequence of all the factories going overseas, as much as anything else. And it has nothing to do with real estate prices. Except that people who perform manual labor here cannot afford to live here, unless they are willing to live in some sort of group setting — as an extended family, or with family, or as immigrants, legal or illegal, pooling their resources to rent a house.

This has been a very big change in the nature of who is here in the Hamptons on a regular basis.

Those living here before all the changes happened were involved in a wide variety of societies. There was a big farming community, a fishing community, both commercial and pleasure, a family merchant class, a wealthy WASP enclave, a black community, a community of baymen, artists, writers, advertising people, a Wall Street community, and a working class.

Today, there are vestiges of these communities, but mostly there are now the very, very wealthy and those serving their needs. It's much less complicated a place than it was. Maybe better, maybe worse. Certainly from a preservation perspective, far better. Because of a 2% tax put on real estate transactions over $200,000 that was put into place six years ago, the towns have tens of millions of dollars to work on saving the place, an amount that is replenished every year.

(This year the total amount DOUBLED over the year before.)

It kind of makes you wonder — what would happen if real estate prices suddenly tanked? What if everyone wanted to go to Bedford for the summer. Or Provincetown? And the Hamptons is now on the "outs."

Or if the laws were changed, so the gap between rich and poor narrowed, and supply for the oceanfront stuff began to exceed demand.

It boggles the mind.

A tip. North Fork real estate prices are on the same upward trajectory found in the Hamptons, but a few footsteps behind. The wine industry has largely been responsible for this new prosperity. Greenport, formerly filled with souvenir shops, five and tens, bars, fish houses and a big nautical supply house, is now changing over to antiques shops, cappuccino cafes and high end clothing stores. Change is everywhere.

And the antique, turn-of-the-century, merry-go-round goes round and around. In Greenport, literally, because it's the centerpiece of the town, right on the waterfront. •

Authors Writing About The Hamptons

Nancy Geary is the author of three novels of suspense. She grew up in New York City, splitting her summers between her family's house in Southampton and her grandmother's home in Massachusetts. She was a prosecutor for the Criminal Bureau of the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office, a participant in the Attorney General's Urban Violence Strike Force, and an attorney with Choate, Hall & Stewart in Boston. Following is an excerpt from Misfortune. It is available at bookstores and at BarnesandNoble.com.

Excerpt from Misfortune By Nancy Geary

"Why am I the only one willing to admit what we're all thinking?" Clio Pratt's voice filled the rectangular sun room. The afternoon heat through the rows of mullioned windows baked the terra cotta tiled floor. She leaned forward, rested her elbows on the table top and clasped her fingers. Her eyes scanned the faces of the five men and women seated around her. "Henry Lewis does not belong here."

Gail Davis, a middle-aged woman with platinum hair tied back from her face with a gros-grain bow, averted Clio's gaze. Gail played with the clasp on the shell-shaped earring that she had removed from her left earlobe. She looked out the window at the expanse of grass tennis courts, and listened to the spray of the sprinkler system watering the acres of green. Her pulse rose by several beats per minute.

The six people seated around the table comprised the Membership Committee of the Fair Lawn Country Club, a private tennis establishment situated on twenty-six acres in Southampton, on the south fork of Long Island, New York. The sprawling shingled clubhouse with its weathered porch and adjacent rose garden, thirty tennis courts and renovated health club provided an idyllic setting for its more than 1000 member families to pass summer days. The Pro Shop offered fashionable tennis attire emblazoned with the club's logo, an interlocked monogram, for which the only acceptable method of payment was a house charge. Less athletic members could play croquet, or run up healthy bar tabs from Pimms Cup with celery or vodka Southsides mottled with mint.

On this particular Wednesday, the Membership Committee gathered for the last time before the official start of the summer season, the Memorial Day holiday weekend.

Gail looked down at the stack of folders in front of her, material that she had distributed to members of the committee well in advance. Each one represented a family, couples who had spent all winter lobbying other members for approval, gathering recommendations, and endearing themselves. Gail knew that many would be disappointed with the outcome of this meeting and would have to reapply the following fall, if at all.

"Henry is a respectable man. He and Louise come with impeccable credentials," George Welch, the Committee's vice-president, countered. "If I could be so bold, I might add that Louise's parents have been members here for longer than you." He shifted in the wicker armchair.

The overhead fan slowly circulated humid air.

"I tend to agree with George," Wallace Lovejoy said, revealing a hint of a British accent. Wallace ran his fingers through his shock of white hair as he glanced down at the pages in front of him filled with personal information on Henry Lewis. "Look, Henry's mortgages are

The Sheltered Island By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Island #321

Shine On, Shine On Harvest Moon....

Most adults love this time of the year. The weather cools and the brilliant colors of the trees are nature's fireworks. But for boaters, this is a sad time. Sometime in October, as Indian Summer escapes and the first few nippy mornings sneak in under the radar, boaters plan that one last outing. Like the last bottle of champagne in the case, the last dance at the wedding, the last peanut in the Crackerjack box, the last call at The Dory, the last boat outing is met with bittersweet appreciation.

"George, we gotta go out one more time. It's supposed to be near 70 degrees on Sunday. Let's go. I'll pack a lunch. We'll bring sweaters."

"Okay. Let's bring a really good bottle of wine, the $5 dollar stuff. I'll take pictures of the trees around the Island."

Sunday at the dock....

"Damn, there's frost on the ropes. Really hard to work them when they're this stiff."

"Maybe it's too cold to go out, George. Maybe this wasn't the best idea."

"You'll be fine. We gotta take her out for one more run. Load the cooler. Watch the deck it's.....oh honey.... are you okay?"

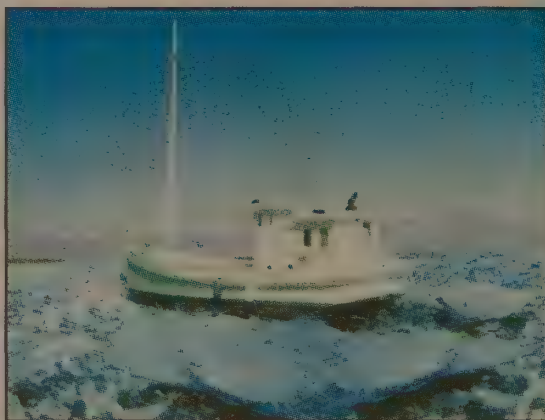

"OOOOWWWW!!! I think I twisted my back, George!"

"Well, don't you have some Tylenol with you or something? You carry a twenty pound hand-bag, I think you have everything from tweezers to a life raft in there."

Crusin' through the water....

"Oh my gawd, I am freezing to death! Go slower!"

"The sun's out, you'll get warm. I'll stop in a minute. I just want to get out farther so I can do a panoramic shot on these trees."

On the water....

"Get your own sandwich, George. If you think I'm gonna get up and let this boat cushion get cold again, you're nuts."

"You look obscene with that coffee thermos between your legs, Mary."

"It's keeping me warm."

"I can do that..."

"I don't think so, not after half a bottle of wine."

"Well, why don't you drink the other half? It'll warm you up and relax your back, and I can relax the rest of you..."

"You can't be serious."

"C'mon, who's gonna see us?"

From Piccozzi's Dock....two guys standing and talking as they look over the water.

"Isn't that George's boat?"

"Yeah. What's he doing out this late in the season? He's gotta be freezin' out there. Look at the chop."

"He's got Mary with him."

"What's she got wrapped around her, the tarp?"

"Uh oh...."

"No... they're not. Geez, how old are they?"

"Hey man, it ain't over till it's over."

From the boat....

"George, isn't that Louie and Joe at Piccozzi's? No, don't wave to them."

"Yeah, it's them."

"What are you doing? Ah, c'mon, don't moon them!"

"Hey we're two hundred yards off shore, that puts us in international mooning waters."

On Piccozzi's Dock...

"Sonafabitch is mooning us! Ha, ha! Mary's doin' it too! Oh, no... Louie don't...."

"Why not? The tourists are gone. C'mon Joe...."

On the boat....

"Stop it! Pull up your pants! I got tears running down my face! Four grown people in a moon-off!"

"Should I give 'em the full Monty?"

"No! No Monty! Leave him where he is, he'll freeze to death!"

Monday morning at work.

"....so George and I took the boat out for one last hurrah and I slipped on the deck, that's how I hurt my back."

"Your weekend was better than mine. I had to get up bail for Joe and Louie for indecent exposure, like either of them's has anything worth exposing. They were mooning somebody on a boat."

"That's really juvenile."

"Tell me about it."

low on both the house here as well as the City apartment. His girls are in private schools." He lifted his eyes and removed his half-glasses. "He's a first rate cardiac surgeon. His wife couldn't be more gracious, or pleasant to be around. I've never heard one word of financial instability, marital infidelity, anything unsavory. What more do we want?"

The room was quiet.

"And how many times have you and Maggie included the Lewises in your summer entertaining schedule?" Clio asked. It was no secret to the assembled group that the Lovejoys socialized with a more diverse crowd than most. They had been known to attend at least one Greek Orthodox wedding, as well as several Bar-Mitzvahs, to travel as far as East Hampton for a lively cocktail party, and even to mingle with the new money, those who had gravitated to eastern Long Island in recent years complete with armed security guards and indoor media centers.

"That's not the point," George defended Wallace.

Wallace inhaled, looked down and appeared to search for a crack in the tiled floor. "We haven't had the pleasure, but I've run into Henry at numerous professional functions."

"I see." Clio said.

"But I expect this summer to be different. We really do like the Lewises, would like to see more of them, socially, I mean."

"Why don't we vote?" Gail spoke up. "We've all had ample opportunity to review his file, to meet with him. What else is there to do?"

"A vote is premature. Henry Lewis hasn't even had the benefit of a thoughtful debate." Beads of perspiration glistened on George's sunburned face. He reached into the back pocket of his khaki slacks for a handkerchief and patted his forehead.

"I don't care how charming, how intelligent, or how perfect Henry Lewis is, he doesn't belong here. He doesn't fit in," Clio said.

Gail couldn't bear to hear the words that she knew were coming. She looked again at the time. Nearly five. She needed a drink. For a moment, she allowed herself to imagine the taste of a gin and tonic, the feel of a crystal tumbler, the smell of lime.

"What more do I have to say?" Clio continued. "Henry Lewis is black."

FRIARS ROAST DONALD TRUMP

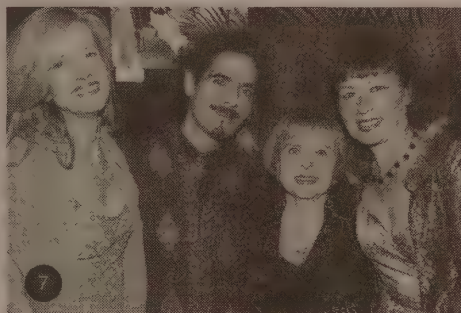

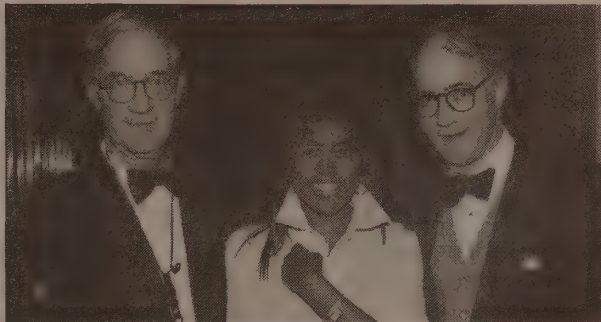

The Donald and his beautiful bride-to-be, Melania Knauss, took some pretty funny shots from the Friars, who roasted him during their Centennial Celebration at the NY Hilton last week. Susie Essman kidded Donald that she wasn't his type, "I'm smart, my breasts are real, and I speak English." NBC hotshot Jeff Zucker joked that "I got the invite to your wedding. I'm sorry I can't make it, but I'll catch the next one." The luncheon was hosted by Regis Philbin, who had to leave early "to talk Kathy Lee off a ledge" someone joked. Most of the jokes were too raunchy to print here, but everything was said in good fun and The Donald was most gracious in accepting his honor.

New Releases From Lieb Family Cellars

If you love Long Island wines like I do, you might have a love-hate relationship with autumn on the East End. You love it because its grape harvest season, often called "crush" in California. The wineries and tasting rooms are filled with the smells of fresh grapes and winemaking. But, especially on the North Fork, roads are packed and parking lots are overflowing with people snatching apples from orchards and scurrying through corn mazes. More time in your car sitting means less time sipping your favorite wines - never a good thing in my book.

Last weekend, I navigated through the pumpkin pickers for Lieb Family Cellars' Annual Warehouse Sale and Vineyard Tour, an exclusive event for wine club members. While there, I was able to taste all of their current releases, each of the nine paired with delectable food from a local caterer.

Along with the always-delicious Merlots (my favorite is the 2001 Reserve), I tasted three new releases that were particularly interesting.

The 2003 Pinot Blanc Reserve ($17), Lieb's signature varietal, has a rich, floral nose filled with citrus and peaches. On the palate, the peaches give way to delicious Anjou pear, citrus and mildly melon flavors. The impressive finish is much longer and much more complex than you'd expect from such a young wine. This mouthwatering white is great with food and I think it would make an interesting foil for sushi and sashimi.

Lieb's 2002 Chardonnay Reserve ($18) is made from 100 percent Chardonnay grapes and is a light straw in the glass. A complex, serious wine, it was whole cluster fermented in steel and then aged in French Oak, giving it a toasty, slightly vanilla nose without any overbearing, raw oakiness. Its flavors start with pear but move toward cinnamon apple toward the finish. Not quite a buttery California Chardonnay yet not quite a white Burgundy either, it's still perfect for meatier fish dishes and, of course, lemon roasted chicken.

Before I even headed to Cutchogue for the event, I knew I'd get to try the Pinot Blanc and the Chardonnay Reserve. They are available at Lieb's Mattituck tasting room and in several wine shops on the Island. And, because previous vintages were top

There are some restaurants that just seem to have the knack of sliding effortlessly from one season into another whereas others seem always to be labeled as summer or winter places. Thanks to the consummate professionalism of owner Jeanette Charvet and her talented staff, including chef Jean-Claude (now in his second season here), Ile de Beaute truly is a restaurant for all seasons. On a recent Saturday evening tables were still set outside for early evening diners wishing to take full advantage of the remains of a beautiful fall day while inside the dining room had a warmth only matched by that of Jeanette's welcome to all of her patrons, both regulars and newcomers. The dining room is one of the most beautiful you will find for many a mile. Simple yet elegant, tables are immaculately laid and set off by a single, perfect rose.

Ile de Beaute has, quite rightly, built a considerable reputation over the past six years for the quality of its French Provencal cuisine. This is not a restaurant where the menu changes wildly every week or so. The main a la carte selection is complemented by a daily table d'hote menu offering a three-course prix fixe.

We started with the soup of the day which, appropriately for this time of year, was made with pumpkin. Served really hot as all soup should be, this was a delicate, perfect start.

Next we had to go back to two perennial favorites of ours when dining here. 'Cuisses de Grenouilles' perhaps sounds better than its translation into 'frogs legs,' but whatever you call them, they were delicious with clean tasting white flesh complemented by a garlic-based sauce. Provencal cooking does feature garlic in most of its dishes, but at Ile de Beaute it is always used discreetly so that it never becomes aggressive or overwhelming, as the escargots once again proved with their succulence and tenderness.

With these dishes we drank Mouton Cadet, a white Burgundy from the famous house of Mouton-

Ile de Beaute

Rothschild, a long time favorite with pleasing crispness.

For our main courses we shared jumbo shrimp served with a Provencal sauce and perfectly cooked white rice followed by the filet mignon with grilled

Portobello mushroom from the table d'hote menu. Again, everything was cooked as ordered and to perfection. The shrimp were not swamped with sauce but left with the sauce on the side, retaining their crispness. The steak was juicy and full of flavor and the accompanying vegetables were so well presented and cooked that I even ate the broccoli! With the steak we switched to a glass of Ternhaven Claret

D'Alvah (made at Greenport's own winery) and one of Paumanok's Cabernet Sauvignons, two very different but very drinkable wines.

From the desserts we chose a chocolate mousse, fit for the most rabid chocaholic and one of the crepes for which Ile de Beaute has become famous. Jeanette's mother prepared the crepes confiture (crepe with strawberry jam), one of those simple sounding dishes that, in reality, can often outshine more elaborate concoctions. The crepes here (and you can choose from over a hundred sweet and savory varieties) are truly exceptional and should not be missed. We finished with strong espresso coffee and a slow walk around Greenport as a digestif, while thinking of the transformation of this town over the last decade and how restaurants such as Ile de Beaute have made so much difference.

Ile de Beaute is open now from Thursday through Sunday for breakfast, lunch and dinner (a great value $25 brunch is served on Sunday). At dinner, appetizers and salads range from $7.70 to $15; main courses from $24 to $39 and the three-course table d'hote from $33 to $40.

The end of the 'lazy, crazy, hazy days of summer' sometimes instills something of a sense of melancholy as the 'season of mists and mellow fruitfulness' takes its place. One positive even as summer departs is that Ile de Beaute remains open dispensing warmth, charm and good food, so go along and enjoy it. One final word though. This is not a place for a rushed meal, come here to enjoy the food, the wine, the ambience and the charm of your companion. That is what dining, as opposed to merely eating, is all about - isn't it?

notch, I knew there was a good chance they'd be just as delicious. I was right.

What I didn't know, however, was that I'd be getting to try an unreleased wine, the 2002 Cabernet Franc ($28). This is Lieb's first Cabernet Franc release, having previously only used their Cab Franc for their Bordeaux-style 2001 Meritage blend ($55) and their other Merlots. Only 150 cases were made.

Dark plum in the glass, this still-young wine was still pretty closed right out of the bottle. With some time to breathe, however, it opened up, offering enticing raspberry and plum aromas. Taking a sip, I was treated to even more dark berry flavors with a nice layer of chocolate and just a hint of herbal character. The tannins were full and powerful, but not too overpowering. Their power, I expect, will start to fade in the next few months, resulting in another great red from Lieb.

This wine will be excellent served along side roasted Long Island duck by the time it's released in early December.

To purchase these and other wines from Lieb Family Cellars, call the tasting room at 631-298-1942.

North Fork Dining: Critics' Choice

Bayview Inn & Restaurant. Culinary fireworks from a new sparkler facing Peconic Bay. The historic Bayview has undergone many identity changes since its inception as an 1860's boutique hotel. Owners Bob and Pat Patchell have restored its original spirit, with seven guestrooms and the North Fork's most exciting new dining room. Thomas Lopez creates separate specials menus, complementing his regular card of winners like spinach pasta with chunky lobster, Asian-style breast of duck, and marinated lamb chops in mint demi-glace. Scrumptious desserts and a kid's menu ensure everyone goes home (or upstairs) happy. South Jamesport Ave. and Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrees, $18-$26. (Trueman-Honey, 8/1/03).

The Clubhouse at Indian Island. Along the pretty Peconic River at Indian Island Golf Course, this restaurant offers quality cooking at realistic prices convenient to diners from both forks. New proprietor Russ Moran transformed a drab dining room to one of warmth and comfort with soft lighting and smartly laid tables. His eclectic menu features the gently pan-fried oysters and clams on the half shell, which you'd swear were just plucked from the bay. French onion soup is deep in flavor. L.I. duck in a pepper cherry sauce and calves liver with bacon & onions were tasty and will leave no one hungry. Riverside Drive & Route 105, Riverhead. 727-0788. Entrees, $11.95-$16.95. (Bradbrook, 4/16/04).

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03).

Desmond's Pub & Restaurant at the Inn at East Wind. The North Fork's new destination hotel hosts an elegant and restful dining room serving excellent a la carte dishes and classic pub fare. Executive chef Richard Laurelli's daily specials are consistent standouts, as evidenced by his limited vegetable soup with lobster meat, as well as the Andalusia-style beef and chicken tapas. Pub favorites like crisply battered cod and chips hit the mark and familiar entrees like grilled lamb chops are perfectly prepared. The wine list is sensibly priced, though short on local vintages. Blueberry creme brulee was an inventive and winning update on a classic dessert. Entrees, $16-$26. 5720 Rt. 25A, Wading River. 929-3500. (Bradbrook, 8/29/03).

Do Little's. An oasis of relaxation in the North Fork's busiest shopping center. For eight years co-owner Donielle Cardinale's restaurant has provided the comforts of customer-friendly, large-portion cooking with panache. The burgers, quiches and salads are consistently good and chicken and pasta entrees often sparkle. Mussel enthusiasts thrill to their preparation in a flavorful Thai garlic sauce. Daily specials often feature inspired ingredient combinations and the fish of the day almost guarantees a creative coupling. Desserts are in transition and the wine list limited, but for comfort food with a flair, it's hard to outdo DoLittle's. Rt. 25, Mattituck Plaza, Mattituck. 298-4000. (Bradbrook, 9/04).

Ille de Beaute. In a beautiful old house with courtyard tables, the spirit of Provence is alive in Greenport with highly authentic French cuisine. Its treatment of classics like escargots, French onion soup, and frogs' legs runs the gamut from superb to extraordinary. Rack of lamb, served with rosemary sauce reduction, is masterly. Desserts are tasty and the crepe options are best expressed in exponential notation. Service is deliberate but attentive. Entrees $24-35. 314 Main Street, Greenport. (Bradbrook, 7/12/02).

La Cuvée Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartar and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakable Asian influence. But executive chef/owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03).

La Plage. A glowing beacon along the Sound coast for sophisticated diners. The stellar reputation of chef/proprietor Wayne Wadington derives from cutting-edge combinations of difficult-to-secure ingredients. His creations fly off the menu as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance try the lightly seared scallops with blue crab mille feuille in a kaffir lime / sweet pea sauce or yellow fin tuna paired with chorizo sausage and butternut squash. Desserts range from decadent (chocolate cake with an espresso mousse) to delicate (Tahitian vanilla crème brûlée.). All are mind boggling. Top wine list, too. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 2/04).

Modern Snack Bar. Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crab cakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrees, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02).

Red Door. A quintessentially North Fork restaurant: Manhattan-caliber cuisine paired with an ambience of low-key charm. The Mediterranean-influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident: a venison chef /owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A touch of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry crème brûlée and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrees - $16-$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03).

Scrimshaw. Chef/co-owner Rosa Ross, whose culinary credentials are carved in many a menu from Hong Kong to Italy to Manhattan, brings her latest invention to Greenport. Nestled at the end of Preston's Dock, there are dazzling views of Shelter Island. The slightly crammed dining room is made intimate and warm by sophisticated lighting and subdued music. The menu is full of interesting tastes, starting with excellent duck confit-stuffed spring rolls and hearty fish chowder. Especially good among the eclectic entrees are tamarind lamb shanks with lemon risotto and the supremely comforting seafood in a sweet, tangy kaffir lime coconut broth. Interesting wine list. Preston's Dock (at end of Main Street), Greenport. 477-8882. (Simm, 06/04).

Stonewall's. Haute cuisine in a tranquil setting, at the Woods Course at Cherry Creek in Riverhead. Step into the warm and inviting dining room, however, and your thoughts will happily shift from golf course to main course. Many superb entrees, including the delicate halibut in a mustard-nut crust, are worth savoring long after the meal has concluded. Duck à l'orange on a bed of wild rice is another standout as is the deeply flavorful lobster bisque. Rigatoni with roasted tomatoes, mozzarella, capers and olives is exquisitely al dente. Fine wines and creatively fruity desserts complete a dining experience par excellence. Entrees $15-$27. 967 Reeves Ave., Riverhead. 506-0777. (Bradbrook, 9/12/03).

Touch of Venice. Top-notch Italian cuisine in a delightful setting on Mattituck Inlet. Named appropriately for location, cuisine and a large mural dominating the dining room, this is family dining par excellence with a sophisticated ambience. Among the kitchen's highlights: Orient Point oysters, chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with gorgonzola; black angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster Meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special is an exciting dish of imaginative complexity and one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood bruschetta is another special to watch for. Entrees $16-$34. Wickham Avenue at Mattituck Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02).

Tuscan House. Your table is yours for the evening in this elegant, upscale Italian. Authentic, classical dishes bear the deft touch of chef William Oster. His fish is exceptionally fresh and his osso bucco masterly. But his virtuosity lies in the care with which he pairs his 16 pastas and his sublime sauces. The results range from delicate to intense. Pappardelle with a puree of beans dressed with soppressata, fresh chilies, garlic and parmigiano reggiano is typically adventurous and winning. The dessert tray is filled with excellent choices. Well-chosen wines, emphasis on regional Italians. 673 Osborn Ave., Riverhead. 727-2330. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01).

Tweed's. Owner Ed Tuccio parlayed his interests in history, Americana and the bison to create this unique eatery. The décor puts one in mind of an expensive turn-of-the-century men's club, but with a romantic twist. Notable appetizers include Oysters Portland, enveloped in sautéed leeks and crisp bacon, and the Bistro Salad, redolent of blue cheese and roasted beets. Aside from Tweed's excellent specialty of the house, succulent farm-raised bison, also recommended are the Sashimi Sesame Tuna, carb-free vegetable lasagna, and Duck Two Ways. Don't skip dessert: the pastry chef is a graduate of the Cordon Bleu in London.

Entrees $19-26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Trueman-Honey, 7/04/03).

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Each year we look forward to Susan and Henry Ferlauto's wine dinner at their Bridgehampton home. Hank, as his friends call him, is a computer consultant whose hobbies are cooking and winemaking. At the tender age of 14, he was introduced to the process of making wine with his father and grandfather, leaving impressionable memories. In the last 10 years, Hank refined his techniques and now produces some 150 bottles of wine annually.

On a recent Saturday, several of Susan and Hank's friends observed this year's winemaking process. Hank's purchased grape of choice this year is Montepulciano. The grapes, previously crushed in the basement winemaking room of Hank's house, were loaded into a 50 gallon tank. With large wooden paddles, Hank and a couple of his strong-armed friends, familiar with the process, stirred the grapes down into the juice, giving the juice its color. Then a giant spigot was opened, and the juice gushed into a large pail. Pails were alternately tipped into a French oak barrel for fermentation, the process of converting sugar to alcohol. The remaining crushed grapes were transferred to a press, a handsome, slatted, upright barrel with a long metal handle and a rachet atop wooden blocks. Looking like something out of a medieval torture chamber, this device allows the last bit of juice to be pressed from the grapes. When the belt-like metal straps surrounding the barrel were unhooked, two sides fell away and there for all of us to gaze at was the "wine cake," a mass of grape skins and stems solidly held together. It was quite a sight. In the end, the mass would be carted away.

After the fermentation process is complete, the juice is transferred from the barrel to a temporary vessel, leaving the sediment behind. The barrel is cleaned of the sediment, and refilled with the wine. Later in the year, the wine goes through a "fining operation" where the remaining particles in the wine are brought to the bottom of the barrel for a cleaner wine.

To further refine his cooking techniques, Hank took a 6-week course at ICIF, an Italian culinary program for foreign students at a university in Castiglioli d'Asti, in the Piedmonte region of Italy, this past spring. He prepared several recipes with some unusual techniques learned at the school for the dinner that he and Susan served to their guests later that day. It was a wonderful evening of delicious food, wine and camaraderie. We toasted our hosts with Hank's remarkable wine of the previous year. The wine pressed this day will hopefully be ready for us to repeat this special happening again next year.

PASTA PUTTANESCA

Hank Ferlauto's version of this spicy dish named for "the ladies of the night" was inspired by the classic he enjoyed in Positano, Italy. Serves 8 as first course or 4 as main course

1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
1 small clove garlic, smashed and minced to a puree
1/8 teaspoon red pepper flakes
1 pint grape tomatoes, halved or quartered, depending on size
1/2 cup gaeta or calamata olives, pitted and roughly chopped
1 tablespoon capers, drained and rinsed
Salt to taste

1/4 cup chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
1 pound penne rigate or other cut pasta
Grated Parmesan cheese, optional

1. In large skillet, heat oil over medium heat. Put in the olive oil, garlic and red pepper flakes. Sauté garlic for about 40-50 seconds, being careful not to brown the garlic. Add the tomatoes, olives and capers. Adjust heat to medium-high, stir the mixture and season with salt to taste. Keep warm.

2. Meanwhile, bring a large saucepan of water to a rolling boil. Add salt and the pasta; cover the pot and return the water to a boil. Uncover and cook the pasta until al dente, about 9-12 minutes, according to package directions. Ladle a little of the pasta water, about 2 tablespoons into the sauce, and stir to mix. Drain the pasta and add with the parsley to the sauce and toss well. Serve at once on warm plates and pass the optional grated cheese at table.

"White" Chicken Cacciatore

Hank tweaked the classic cacciatore style and lightened this chicken dish with white wine and small farm fresh grape tomatoes
Serves 4-6

1 3 1/2 pound chicken cut into small pieces
1 cup instant flour such as Wondra
Coarse (kosher) salt and pepper
1/2 cup extra virgin olive oil
1 large white onion cut into 1/2 inch dice
1 each red and yellow sweet bell pepper, cut into 1/2 inch dice
1 pint grape tomatoes chopped into small dice
1/2 cup dry white wine such as Pinot Grigio or Sauvignon Blanc
1 cup low-sodium chicken broth
12 sprigs of Italian leaf parsley, leaves only, chopped

1. Rinse and dry chicken pieces with paper towel. Mix the flour, salt, and pepper together and dust each piece of chicken, shaking off the excess.

2. Heat olive oil in a large heavy skillet over medium-high heat and cook chicken pieces in batches as necessary until golden brown on both sides. With a slotted spoon, transfer pieces as they are browned onto a paper towel to drain.

3. Add the onions and peppers to the skillet the chicken cooked in and cook, stirring occasionally, until the onions are translucent. Stir in the tomatoes and cook for one minute. Deglaze the pan with the wine scraping up the browned bits from the chicken. Cook until the wine has been reduced about half. Add the chicken broth and bring to the edge of a simmer. Return the chicken into the pan and cook, stirring occasionally, about 30 minutes with cover ajar. Stir in the parsley and serve.

Biscotti di Prato

Yield: about 48 biscotti

1 pound whole natural almonds
1 cup granulated sugar
7/8 cup packed brown sugar
2 1/4 cups flour
1/2 tablespoon baking powder
1/2 cup unsalted butter, cut into slices
1/3 cup currants and grated orange zest, optional
2 eggs
Egg wash

Preheat oven to 375 degrees

1. Finely chop 1/3 of the almonds (may do in a food processor) then chop 2/3 of the almonds coarsely.

2. Place almonds, two sugars, flour, and baking powder in a stand-up mixer or in a bowl with hand-electric beaters and blend dry ingredients using low speed. Add butter and blend to mix. Add eggs, one at a time, and blend thoroughly. If adding currants and zest mix them into the batter.

3. Place the dough on a floured surface then roll out to one large loaf; cut into 4 equal parts. Roll each of the 4 pieces into logs about 8-9 inches long.

4. Arrange on a parchment lined cookie sheet about 1 1/2 inches apart; flatten tops slightly and brush with egg wash.

5. Bake in preheated oven for 30 minutes; remove and, while still warm, cut into diagonal slices.

6. Reduce oven heat to 300 degrees; return slices to the oven and bake 25-30 minutes longer until crisp and dry. Cool biscotti on a rack. If desired, dip each one into melted chocolate and let dry. Biscotti will keep in a tin for weeks.

Dining in the Hamptons

JT's Place was the perfect setting for a cool rainy Friday evening. After a busy work week, there's nothing better than catching up with a few friends over dinner and drinks. I didn't know what to expect when I walked through JT's door, but I was pleasantly surprised by its charming rustic vibe. The bar was full in anticipation of the Yankee-Red Sox game.

I was immediately greeted by Serena Hidalgo, the manager, and escorted to our table. My friends were unfortunately detained, so I decided to begin with a glass of Chardonnay and warm goat cheese salad. The goat cheese was delicately fried and served over field greens mixed with candied pecans dressed in Champagne vinaigrette. The sweet and tangy flavor matched with the creamy constancy of the goat cheese and crisp greens was delightful.

The clock was ticking and my friends were nowhere in sight. Would I be dining alone? What's a girl to do? I continued to peruse the menu and chatted it up with Serena. She told me that JT's would be entering its fifth season this November. Owner James Thomas (JT, obviously) understands the dynamics of preparing and offering the freshest and finest food. He purchases all of their produce, meat and fish locally. He was formerly a chef and still helps prepare several items along with his Executive Chef Greg Hansen. JT's Place has built a loyal client base that is continually growing.

Finally, my friends had arrived. Our waitress, Whitney, delivered more wine while we decided what to order. We continued the meal with shrimp quesadillas prepared with mushrooms, tomatoes and cheddar cheese and Maryland lump crabcakes served in a lemon butter sauce. The crabcake was "all crab-meat" with no filler. This tenderly pan-fried cake was sweet and succulent paired with a silky light butter sauce. Chef Hansen learned from the best and this was one specialty that was influenced by the creativity of restaurateur and chef Star Boggs. As for the shrimp quesadillas, they were abundantly overflowing with fresh shrimp and halved mushrooms and tomatoes, smothered in cheese and served with sour cream. A few other standout appetizers are the grilled gorgonzola sirloin steak tidbits, corn fritters, and crispy crab spring rolls with sweet and spicy dipping sauce.

Next up were our entrees. It was a difficult choice, but we went with JT's very popular gorgonzola steak, pan seared wild striped bass with a roasted pepper glaze and braised veal with brandied mushroom cream sauce. The steak was cooked to perfection served with mashed potatoes and grilled veggies. Definitely a hit! The veal is a stew-like entrée that JT's adds to the menu in the fall. The meat was tender and mixed with onions and mushrooms. The pan-seared striped bass was light and flaky served with rice. The roasted pepper glaze sauce added an extra pop while not being too overbearing.

JT's offers a regular menu as well as nightly and daily specials. Several favorites include the crispy local flounder served in a lemon butter sauce, Grandma Kelly's meat loaf with mashed potatoes and (on this particular night) a roast thick-cut swordfish with lemon herb crust.

One would conclude that after we completed our generous meals there would be little room left for dessert. Wrong! Once we saw the platter of amaretto and key lime cheesecake as well as a warm homemade brownie served with whipped cream and fresh berries, how could we resist? We (almost) finished the entire plate. The sweet decadent desserts were the perfect ending to a relaxing and most enjoyable evening. JT's is a warm and friendly spot that offers great fare. To sum it up, JT's can be considered the Cheers of Hampton Bays...where everyone knows your name.

Dining in the Hamptons

Bamboo Nights

The population of the East End is dwindling as the leaves abandon the trees, and that means that the VIP party has begun. Yes, people, there is no need to mourn the loss of summer. Our small town vibe is kicking again. One way that I plan to brave the solitary winter months is to designate each night with a different activity. And the one night that has been in place since I moved here and will have my loyalty as long as I fall asleep under Hamptons skies is Thursday. And the place to be on Thursday is Bamboo.

The wind whips through autumn fields as I drive home from work down Route 27 towards East Hampton. The music is playing, the traffic is light, and the October sun has slipped into corn fields. 7:30 is no longer daylight. This transition, the shortening of the days, the cooling of the air, and the thinning out of the population, sometimes has a tendency to make me feel a little isolated. But not when I'm throwing my scarf over my shoulder to walk across a crowded parking lot. Not when I'm opening the door to the dim lighting of Bamboo Restaurant. Not when I'm making my way to the sushi bar, the sushi chefs waving as I enter, and taking a seat with my Thursday night friends. On Thursday nights at Bamboo, the off-season Hamptons is wide awake.

So what drew me to Bamboo in the first place? It was a lonely arrival to the East End, in the midst of a late winter snowstorm. I didn't know anyone, and I didn't know how I was going to meet people. Then, a friend of a friend enlightened me that if you go to Bamboo, on

Sushi chefs, Sam and Jaki

Route 27 in East Hampton, on a Thursday night and grab a seat at the bar, you can wash down your free sushi with half-price sakitinis, made with fresh cucumbers. Yes, I said the sushi is free. When you sit down and begin sipping, one of the sushi chefs leans over the bar with a plate of sushi rolls delicately arranged on a dish. "Want some sushi?" he asks. No strings attached. Just eat it. And when you're finished, eat some more. And some more. How can you lose? Every time you polish off a plate, one of the sushi chefs is leaning through the bamboo plants, peering around the giant stone Buddha, asking if you want some more. California rolls, spicy tuna rolls, shrimp tempura rolls, and salmon rolls. No joke. The ginger and wasabi are communal, so you may have to tap your neighbor on the shoulder and ask for the giant glass filled with fresh ginger. It's the family supper for those solitary folk out here, for whom much of their family is at least one distant bridge or three boat rides away.

I usually end up spending a decent amount of money, between the tips for the fabulous sushi chefs, as well as the delicious sakitinis. Since they're only $6 on Thursdays, I have been known to have more than one. Beware, though. These drinks are strong. They're made with vodka, sake, and, the one non-alcoholic ingredient, cucumbers. Don't think those cucumbers are going to save you... by the time you've finished two plates of sushi and you're getting to the bottom of your first saketini, those cucumbers have soaked up so much alcohol, they've each become a little injection of vodka.

By the end of another fabulous evening at Bamboo, my friends and I are raising our glasses to toast the "crew." This crew was borne in Bamboo, grew up in Bamboo, and is now flourishing every Thursday night, without fail, in Bamboo. It's one of those things that you come to count on. No matter what happens during the week, no matter how many times my life ends and begins, I know I have a seat on Thursday night, surrounded by friends, life, and a bottomless plate of sushi.

THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

IGBY GOES DOWN

Please do yourselves a favor – get out the calendar and note that this Saturday, October 23rd, and, for the next four Saturdays, Dan's Papers' They Made The Movie Here Film Festival will be in full swing at the Ross School's sumptuous Lecture Hall starting at 3 p.m. Along with the film comes chit-chatting, refreshments and no standing in lines. This is all free. Be there. I look forward to meeting with you again, or for the first time. I am, your humble host Guy de Fraumeni and the lovely Sarah Halsey co-chairs. No, wrong – there are very comfortable theatre seats.

Igby Goes Down is the story of the calamitous young man, afflicted with desire and attempting to make the leap from sorrowful boyhood, his bounding endeavors vaulting him far above and beyond the essential truths he's searching for, and, instead, plunge him plummeting, headlong, in a flailing, free-fall descent into self-destructive annihilation, or worse, the spiritual void of his parents. This is the story of Igby Goes Down, a small film from 2002 that projects venomous satire and realistic comedy with very sharp, large teeth that grin bitingly from one end of the wide screen to the other.

Giving the performance of a lifetime (he's maybe 20) is Kieran Culkin as Igby Slocumb, a close and notable descendant of J.D. Salinger's Holden Caulfield in Catcher in the Rye, which has recently spawned other not such distinguished relatives as Tadpole and The Good Girl. In those movies, the young man gets to go to bed with an older woman. Of course, Igby does that too, but that's not Igby's main thrust (pun intended). What he does best is parry and lunge at the proffering of the American Dream, which could be empty entitlement of the good things in life that has put Igby's father, Bill Pullman, into a mental institution and his mother, Susan Sarandon, popping prescription drugs to maintain the height of snobbery she has social climbed to, by exhibiting loud anti-Semitism and monstrous maternal incompetence. That is . . . until Igby and his conformist brother, Oliver, slip a plastic bag over the sedated mother's head. It quiets her snoring and her miserable life.

You know a film's direction when it opens with matricide delivered by the two prep school, blazer jacketed guys, while their mother languished in her over-decorated, over-stuffed bedroom, wafting a wicked whiff of WASPy Washington D.C. society.

From the surreal opening, the script flashes back to Kieran's Igby and his misadventures in New York and other manhood extending possibilities, like the Hamptons, where wildly antic situations run rampant with scathing sarcasm, deft dialogue and natural, soured confrontations with an excellent cast that performs in the best kind of ensemble, playing against each other with the discomfort and sexiness of a crowded subway train. Standouts are Amanda Peet as a lost-in-a-loft, ruin-remainder of heroin and Claire Danes as a dropout from Bennington gone Bohemian and dividing romance betwixt the brothers. Oliver is done very smoothly and deeply by Ryan Philippe, and the brothers vying for Claire's sex is downright heartfelt . . . as is this quite sensitive movie. Obviously the theme of the film is not new . . . see, The Graduate, over-glossed, over-romanticized and, over-Mike Nichols-plated. The movie was a hit. IGBY was not a big hit. But this film, written and directed by Burr Steers, has a soul. It's a restless soul and that's the best. It rebels against hypocrisy and the corruption of the privileged and their ability to suffocate spirit. And, there's the fabulous performance of Kieran Culkin.

It's a humdinger and there's more later. See ya', kid.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals.

The Hamptons International Film Festival is on now in East Hampton, Southampton, Sag Harbor and Montauk (see some suggestions, below). There are also three good theater productions on local stages and legendary Israeli singer/songwriter Chava Alberstein at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Saturday. Several well-known authors speak here this weekend, there's a tribute evening Saturday for poet Vince Clemente, and classic film screenings this week.

HAMPTONS INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

The Festival runs through Monday. More than 100 new features, documentaries and shorts will be screened. If tickets are not available for your first choices, all films seem interesting this year. Films competing for the Golden Starfish feature award: Fighting Tommy Riley, Illusion, Living 'til the End, Most High, and The Tollbooth. Documentaries in competition are Army of One, Following Sean, Hardwood Dreams, A Touch of Greatness and The Untold Story of Emmett Louis Till. There are eight Spotlight Films with well-known actors, including the documentary One Bright Shining Moment: The Forgotten Summer of George McGovern and the feature film Sexual Life with Anne Heche, James LeGros and Dule Hill.

Other films of interest include the documentaries The Last Victory and WMD: Weapons of Mass Deception, and the feature Bereft in the World Cinema section of the Festival. The Angry Skies: A Cambodian Journey, one of the Conflict & Resolution selections, concerns East Hampton physician Blake Kerr's discovery of Khmer Rouge atrocities on a recent trip. Terrorists focuses on a small U.S. town where the local police chief goes overboard when he thinks there's a terrorist threat.

Tickets are $12 for most films, $20-35 for Spotlight Films, $25 for symposiums and the closing night film. A schedule of screenings and ticket purchasing is available online at www.hamptonsfilmfest.org. Tickets are also at the Festival box office, 60 The Circle, East Hampton (behind the Bank of New York) from 9 a.m. until 7 p.m. or by calling 1-866-HIFF-TIX. Some "rush" seats may be available at the theaters 10 minutes before a screening; there is a waiting line and all sales are cash. Monday, October 25, is "locals' day." Films to be shown are posted on the front doors of the East Hampton Cinema on Sunday evening – and there is no charge on Monday.

THEATER

This is the last weekend to see River Theatre Company's production of Stacy Dermont's acclaimed new play Homefront based on 1861-64 letters from Southampton whaler and Union soldier James Foster to his Bridgehampton sweetheart Phebe Rogers. Performances are Fri. and Sat. at 8 p.m. and Sun. at 2 p.m. at the Southampton Historical Museum. Tickets are $15-18 and must be reserved by calling 631-283-2494.

David Auburn's award-winning mystery/drama Proof continues at the Quogue Community Theater. The show plays Thursday to Saturday at 8 p.m., Sunday at 2:30 p.m. through October 31. For tickets to the Hampton Theatre Company production, call the box office at 653-8955.

The Halloween spirit is alive at Riverhead's Vail-Leavitt Music Hall where the musical spoof Vampires Suck, The Musical is playing Friday and Saturday, 8 p.m., and Sunday at 2 p.m. through October 31. Tickets ($20) can be reserved by calling 631-727-5782.

MUSIC

Well-known Israeli singer/songwriter Chava Alberstein, with Oved Efrat on guitar and Avi Agababa on percussion, will sing her love songs and songs of peace and oppression at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Saturday, 8 p.m. For tickets ($50-75), call the PAC box office at 631-288-1500.

On Friday at 7 p.m., Southampton's Rogers Memorial Library presents Banjo Rascals playing ragtime, Dixieland, swing and singalong songs. There is no charge for this hour-long program, but space is limited; please call 631-283-0774. There's a concert of Cole Porter's songs at the Southampton United Methodist Church on Friday at 7:30 p.m. There is no admission charge but donations are appreciated.

Entertainment In The Hamptons

review: reckless...by gordin & christiano

The snow is forever falling, and seemingly, it is always Christmas, in Craig Lucas' amusingly original play, Reckless. Christmas is that joyful season of merry good cheer when everything is right with the world, that fanciful time when children still believe in Santa, and adults are filled with good will for their fellow man. But at what sacrifice? Ah ha, the rub, and that is exactly the point in Mr. Lucas' quirky tale in which a naïve housewife's world begins to unravel on Christmas Eve.

Tony award winning actress Mary Louise Parker portrays Rachel, the housewife, as a wide eyed innocent, who unknowingly is about to depart on the journey of her life. Rachel is in a state of euphoria, sitting cozily in bed with her gloomy husband, Tom (Thomas Sadoski), on Christmas Eve as the snow idyllically falls in the background. She is as giddy as a little girl on the night before Christmas waiting for Santa to arrive, when she turns to her husband and asks him what is wrong? In a moment of guilt, he discloses to her that he has taken out a contract on her life. Someone will be breaking into the house momentarily to help him stage her murder. He tells her they won't take the money back, as he pulls a gun from under the mattress and encourages her to escape through the bedroom window before it's too late. Shocked and dismayed, Rachel, wearing only a flannel nightgown and slippers obligingly departs into the snowy night on her journey of self discovery. It is a bit like Alice falling through the hole into Wonderland, only this is the real world, but like Alice In Wonderland nothing is as it seems and Rachel, whose world will never again be quite the same, is about to discover just that.

In the meantime, however, fate intervenes and Rachel is rescued by a physical therapist named Lloyd (Michael O'Keefe), who brings her to the home he shares with his apparently deaf girlfriend, Pooty (Rosie Perez), who is in a wheelchair, who we later learn, can secretly speak. When Rachel asks, "Did you slip on the ice?" Lloyd quickly answers, "She's paraplegic." And so Rachel is thrown into a bizarre world that includes embezzlement, murder, a series of sessions with different psychiatrists (played beautifully by Debra Monk) and appearances on a television talk show as well as a quiz show called "Your Mother or Your Wife," before she reaches her final destination. Along the way, she will find work at a charity organization run by Roy (Jeremy Shamos), where she will assist a dour, untrusting bookkeeper Tish (Olga Merediz), who conceals a secret of her own.

Mr. Lucas is an uncanny writer who has taken an intriguing premise and used it to weave an unpredictably funny story of a woman's journey to maturity. He is supported here by an excellent ensemble of actors that are skilled at maintaining the comedy's surreal balance between truth and illusion.

The direction by Mark Brokaw treads that fine line with a serviceable fluidity that keeps the charming staging moving at a briskly entertaining pace. However, he has not encouraged the actors to go far enough in creating the believability of the evening's wacky events so as to allow the play to become truly hilarious. What we do get are actors playing it straight, but they come off more as cartoon characters, instead of people increasingly disturbed by the atmosphere of the mayhem that eventually pushes them over the edge. This is especially apparent in Mary Louise Parker's interpretation of Rachel. As beguiling as she is, Ms. Parker's Rachel stays on one level for far too long, so that we do not witness her gradual unraveling. As a result, instead of bearing witness to her self discovery, we are more annoyed by her grating voice. She does get there at the end and it is most believable, but the process has not been revealed to us, so much of the humor is lost.

The play, first produced in 1983, was a subsequent success off-Broadway in 1988 and was even made into a 1995 film starring Mia Farrow. I have never seen the previous productions, but feel it might have fared better in a smaller off-Broadway venue, where the nuances of the comedy might have been allowed to flicker more brightly. Still the Manhattan Theatre Club, in association with the Second Stage Theatre, has done an admirable job with the current staging and the entire design team is to be commended. The play is certainly one of Mr. Lucas' finest and his message of how frightening and tragic life really is remains universal. The moral seems to be nothing lasts forever, so roll with the punches being glad you are alive, because it is better than the alternative.

Reckless is now playing on Broadway at the Biltmore Theatre, 261 West 47th Street. For tickets call 212-239-6200 or at www.telecharge.com at the box office.

review: homefront

While I walked down Meetinghouse Lane last Sunday afternoon, I wondered how writer Stacy Dermont and director Toni Munna were going to stage the play, Homefront, at the Southampton Historical Museum. I thought possibly on the open grounds outside the museum, but with the shiver of autumn in the air I figured that was an impossibility. Maybe there was a secret theatre somewhere that I had never seen before? That wasn't the case, either. Instead I found roughly forty seats arranged in one of the exhibit rooms.

Intimate and warm, the room established a certain degree of closeness between actors and patrons that reminded me of the Swan Theatre in Stratford-upon-Avon. In a post-show "talk-back," Brian Raber, playing the role of James R. Foster, confessed that having the audience at such a close proximity to the actors requires a good deal of discipline on the part of those on stage; even subtle movements can be a distraction. But none of the three actors seemed to be drawn out of character over a squeaky chair or a craning neck. Instead they were engrossed in the movement and flow of the play.

Choosing to take advantage of all areas of the impermanent theatre, Toni Munna (Resident Director of The River Theatre Company) divided the stage into two settings, enveloping the audience. The Rogers home sat stage center and flowed down the right side of the audience as actors entered and exited (including a quick comical row off-stage). To the audience's left was Foster's Civil War encampment. Seemingly tucked into an alcove with little light, the space, although adjacent to the Rogers setting, felt completely disconnected. Presumably, this was the intent of Ms.

Munna and Ms. Dermont (who wrote the play specifically designed for the space at the SHM), but this separation, while dramatic, rendered the only seeming connection between Phebe (Bianca Massi) and Melanie Rogers (Marie Sellers) to James R. Foster to be Foster's letters.

Seeking to write a play about local history, playwright Stacy Dermont of Sag Harbor approached the Southampton Historical Society and inquired if they had any love letters from the past. Oddly enough, a few weeks prior, five letters, all written from Union soldier James R. Foster of Southampton, to Phebe Rogers of Bridgehampton, had been donated to the museum. The letters, read in their entirety through the play, created a plot line of their own. They already presented a "beginning, middle, and an end," said Dermont, so with one side of the story already in her hands, she went searching to find the right voice for Phebe Rogers. After interviewing contemporary "service-men's sweethearts," the character began to take shape. Also within the letters, Foster made mention of Melanie Rogers, so with literary license, Dermont molded Melanie to play the part of both the wiser, older sister as well as a vein of comic relief in a play that otherwise tiptoes on the grave.

The character of Phebe Rogers is quite the undertaking. Although it can be argued that the letters themselves are the primary character of the play, it can be contested easily enough that the central focus rests on the shoulders of East Hampton High School student, Bianca Massi, who carries this weight effortlessly. This is not to say that Massi's performance is the only one worthy of merit. Sellers added depth and levity, presenting the audience with the only snippets of an outside world, co-existing with the isolation of Phebe and James.

Brian Raber & Bianca Massi

The letters, obviously not written for the dramatic stage, seemed to minimize the role of James. But by adhering to and solely reading the personal correspondences, as well as being situated on the far left of the stage, it seemed that the development of Foster's character and, in effect, Raber's rein on him led him to play an almost morose, depressed man, who, as the play unfolds, looks more and more bleakly toward the future.

The undertones and parallels between the current state of America's military involvement are left as just that. Ms. Dermont did not try to use the play as a political platform, but simply let the letters speak for themselves. Nevertheless, the universal hardships of war, any war, resonate through the carefully scripted, thoroughly enlightening performance.

Homefront has three remaining performances on Friday Oct. 22nd and Saturday, 23rd at 8 p.m. and Sunday, 24th at 2 p.m. For reservations or more information please call (631) 283-2494.

Film Festival Fare: Shorts By Local Filmmakers

At first glance, veteran filmmaker Jeff Dell and movie reviewer Doris Toumarkine seem to have little in common, except that they both are longtime residents of East Hampton and New York. And both have shorts in this year's Hamptons International Film Festival. Judging from their works, another commonality emerges: their shorts deliver potent political and/or sociological punches.

Mr. Dell's film, Dodge City, is a reworking of a movie he made thirty-seven years ago. It was 1967 and the beginning of anti-Vietnam sentiments as well as lingering effects from the Civil Rights Movement. In the original version, Mr. Dell uses his editing expertise to juxtapose two children (one black, the other white) who are playing with stark images from the Vietnam War.

The new piece keeps these images intact, adding color superimpositions (taken from TV news coverage) of marching soldiers, crashing planes and exploding bombs. The movie's impact is daunting, clearly showing how war is still with us, its inhumanity still haunting our national psyche. The film's effect has been duly noted; both the old and new versions have been honored at several important festivals, including a prestigious prize at Colorado's recent Moondance Festival.

Anti-war sentiment is something that has also been consistent with Mr. Dell; his other Festival short, Vote America, also bears a connection to Dodge City. Mr. Dell is not one to mince words or hide his opinion when he says, "It's important for people to vote. This way we'll get the President we want."

Liza De Guia, Vote America

Again, the film's technical strength lies in its editing. People on East Hampton's Main Street are asked their presidential preference. This time around, however, Mr. Dell gives a balanced perspective, with an equal amount of responses going to both Kerry and Bush. Mr. Dell being Mr. Dell, he notes to yours truly, "When people said they supported Bush, I had to walk away from the shooting." (Good thing his co-director, Frank Roccanova, carried on without him at these points.)

Mr. Toumarkine's short was also shot locally, at Parsons Duck Pond in Springs. Called Why a Duck?, it conveys the director's personal worldview as well, questioning our behavior and values. Unlike Mr. Dell's movie, however, it's a scripted work that possessed its own inherent challenges, logistically speaking.

According to Ms. Toumarkine, everything that could go wrong with the film's production process did go wrong. First, a lead actor couldn't make it at the last minute, and she ended up asking a person she had just met the day before to fill in. Although the woman was on her way to New York, she turned around and came back.

Then there was the matter of weather. Ms. Toumarkine remembers the climate with a smile. "I consulted reports and a local naturalist about a good day to shoot, but wouldn't you know that we had the worst downpour in memory on our filming day. Thank goodness it cleared up in the afternoon because we only had two days to shoot."

Despite other problems with getting a permit, all ended well. Which means a lot to this first-time director, whose previous movie experience includes a myriad of pursuits: screenwriting; reviewing for The Hollywood Reporter and currently for Film Journal International; producing; and most recently developing a company, BackSplash, which provides audience feedback to independent filmmakers.

Oh, yes, before we forget, Mr. Dell and Ms. Toumarkine share another commonality. They both are thinking of making a full-length film. Perhaps we'll be writing about these endeavors next year, same time, same station.

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Why a Duck will be showing on Thursday, Oct. 21, at 5 p.m. at Guild Hall. Dodge City and Vote America, will be showing on October 21 at 5 p.m. and October 24th at noon, respectively.

Celebrating 70 Years in 2004

THE HAMPTONS

INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

When You're Not At The Movies...

Just as the dust seemed to settle from the chaotic summer season, our sleepy village awakens again with the buzz of the Hamptons International Film Festival. This extended weekend offers far too many films to take in, but we can do our best to hit up the ones that really intrigue us. And for the time in between, when our eyes need a break from the big screen, there is plenty else to do in keeping with the spirit of film.

Every year, a deserving actor is presented with the Golden Starfish Award For Career Achievement. This year, both Anthony LaPaglia and Gena Rowlands will be honored with this award. The festival also presents discussions between a distinguished moderator and a special guest. The series, called "A Conversation With..." will feature Rowlands and La Paglia as well. It will take place on Saturday between 4 and 6 p.m. at Guild Hall.

They will also act as mentors for the three-year-old Rising Stars Program, which will be held on the lawn of the First Presbyterian Church in East Hampton at 1 p.m. on Saturday. This part of the Film Festival was conceived as a means of recognizing the importance of the up-and-coming actors in independent films, and offers an excellent mode of discovering lesser-known talent and bringing it out into the open. This year, Star Magazine will be a main sponsor of the Rising Stars Program.

Back again this year after a successful debut last October, the International Forum is designed as the gathering place for international filmmakers and organizations. All festival attendees are invited to stop by the tent for refreshments and Internet access. The International Forum will also house panel discussions, seminars, and events. The Forum is working to support US distribution of foreign films. There will be a free Open Forum Discussion at 3 p.m. daily from Thursday to Saturday. On Thursday, the title is "Year of the Documentary: The Influence of Politics and the Public." On Friday, the topic is "International Perspective: Films In A Changing World." On Saturday, the same issue is addressed from a different standpoint in "American Perspective: Films In A Changing World." The International Forum tent is located on Main Street in East Hampton.

Another highlight of the film festival to be enjoyed outside the theatres is the wide array of enriching panels. Industry professionals will participate in interviews, workshops, and panel discussions. These discussions will take place throughout the weekend, from Thursday to Saturday, on the lawn of the First Presbyterian Church. Here are just a few of the interesting topics that will be explored.

On Friday, from 11 a.m. to 12 p.m., there will be a panel called "Alternative Distribution," addressing the ways in which an aspiring filmmaker can get his/her picture seen. From 1 to 2 p.m., "Star Power" discusses the weight of big names in film, and some of the innovative ways to package your film. From 4 to 5 p.m. will be a panel on "Women In Entertainment."

Saturday will host another wave of panels, beginning with "Documentary Film: The New Age," from 11 a.m. to 12 p.m. Later, from 4 to 5 p.m., "Hollywood and the Short" will explore how to use your short film as a type of "calling card" to get your name and voice out.

Upstairs in East Hampton's BookHampton there will be more free open forum discussions between Thursday and Saturday, concerning issues like Copyright Laws (Thursday, 12 p.m.), Crafting a Scene (Saturday, 12 p.m.), and other topics.

There will also be Master Classes, which offer the unique experience of learning the craft of filmmaking from an insider's perspective. The two classes are "The Living Room Candidate: Presidential Campaign Commercials 1952-2004" (Fri, 10:30 a.m., UA6) and the "Cinematography Master Class" with cinematographer Michael Ballhaus (Sat, 10:30 a.m., UA6).

THE HAMPTONS

preview: pigeonmen

The Hamptons International Film Festival each year offers aspiring filmmakers the platform to showcase their films. The festival has evolved since its inception in 1992 by adding new categories and venues. One of the more recent additions is the student film category. Film students and future filmmakers submit their work for review, and if they're lucky and talented enough, their film will be showcased at the festival.

This year, there are students from various colleges and universities including Columbia University, Temple University, New York University and the American Film Institute just to name a few. It was three students from Brown and one from Skidmore, Joe Charap, Josh Koplewicz, Peter Russotti and Daniel Murray, who created Pigeonmen, a 10-minute documentary filmed in Dublin.

When this group of friends and colleagues took on this project, they formed Salty Films (a production company). Salty Films is dedicated to producing the works of young, aspiring writers and directors. For this first project, they produced and filmed Pigeonmen. I would say they're on the right track, since they made it into this year's Hamptons International Film Festival.

I recently caught up with Josh Koplewicz, one of the students/ producers of the film, while he was in Prague attending their film festival. Of course, I didn't have the luxury of flying to Prague, so we chatted on the phone. Josh told me that the project came to fruition after they heard the story through a mutual friend who had traveled through Dublin and encountered this interesting character by the name of John McLaughlin. John is an older man who lives in a poor section of Dublin, Ireland. John's life and first love consists of caring for hundreds of pigeons. The entire community shares in this passionate love for pigeons and pigeon racing.

Pigeon racing is intended to prove that pigeons are intelligent creatures and loyal friends. The film reveals how the simple things in life, such as "pigeons," can bring joy, pride and camaraderie to people who live modestly in a poor neighborhood.

This 10-minute snapshot follows the man in charge, McLaughlin, who transports the audience into an in-depth view of this special community in Ireland. The entire film was shot on digital video on a shoestring budget of only $2,000. The story follows McLaughlin for a week while he prepares and cares for his hundreds of pigeons prior to the race. Josh told me that the project took approximately 6 months to complete from beginning to the final cut. They wanted to make certain that the overall storyline would translate this unique passion to audiences worldwide. After editing and making some necessary adjustments, the final cut was finally ready.

Pigeons have historically played an important role in our lives. They've carried messages from far away places and were a reliable source for communication during WWI. They're extraordinary creatures that have been one of man's best friends for centuries. This short documentary is definitely an intriguing and close-up look into one of the more unique sports of our day.

—Kelly Krieger

Pigeonmen will be shown in East Hampton at 10 p.m. UA6 before the film Corn on Friday evening, 10/22, and again on Sunday, October 24 at 4 p.m. (Please verify all times and locations www.hamptonsfilmfest.org)

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

REUBEN KADISH AT POLLOCK-KRASNER HOUSE

Incongruent as it seems, Reuben Kadish's exhibit at the Pollock-Krasner House has a connection to the movies. (At least in this critic's mind.) Which is certainly fitting, since this is the week of the Hamptons International Film Festival. Admittedly, we have movies on our minds.

Explanation: the first aspect that struck yours truly when viewing Kadish's terra cotta sculpture was one piece's ("Head") resemblance to a Star Wars figure, Jabba the Hut. Strange as this may sound, perhaps it's not so odd after all when we consider that George Lucas' characters were both futuristic and also an homage to the past. We've noticed than many sci-fi films combine both the future and the primitive (eg. Mad Max with Mel Gibson takes place in the future, but the characters wield primitive weapons and clothes.)

Simply put, both a movie like Star Wars and Kadish's sculpture possess an archetypal vision, the latter going beyond the artist's mythological inspirations from India. True, there's a grotesque quality attributed to some figures signifying strangeness, but there's also a familiar element conveying the universality and endurance of the human condition. Moreover, many of Kadish's forms seem both animal and man, another opposing concept.

"Head," 1962

Such contradictory configurations imbue Kadish's figures with archetypal traits: thus, regardless of their strange shapes, we somehow "know" them. They are us.

Similar dynamics play a part in Kadish's paintings. Consider the 1943 "Bodies on the Ganges," where figures intermingle in a mass on the ground. They are simultaneously dead and alive, human and not human, familiar and supernatural. Archetypal.

POSTSCRIPT

While the show at Ashawagh Hall, "A Legacy of Art," is no longer on view, it deserves validation for its honoring the recent deaths of Ibram Lassaw, Emily Hixon, Ellen Peterson, Rose Slivka and Mary Liberatore. The exhibit also included work by other artists in our area who are alive. While many of their pieces can be seen around the world, it's always good to be reminded that we're fortunate to have them among us.

There are a few surprises: Audrey Flack's 1949 abstract paintings; Bill King's sculpture with a terra cotta face; Marie Rosso's Brancusi-like figure; Diana Plitt's lyrical "Dreaming."

Reuben Kadish's exhibit will be on view at the Pollock-Krasner House until Oct. 30.

JUST FOR KIDS

Personalize Your Pumpkin

The car ride was supposed to be 20 minutes. It was an hour. You thought you could park in the lot. It was filled. The thing you stepped in while walking along Montauk Highway, it's seeping through the bottom of your boat shoes. You are on the verge of dropping the 18 pumpkins haphazardly thrown into your arms. Oh, and there's a line.

While the joys of pumpkin picking are becoming slightly less joyous, the fun of carving them in the privacy of your own home is about to get even more fun! While there's nothing wrong with opting for the traditional triangle eyes and zigzag mouth, there are a few more options to make your pumpkin Halloween savvy.

One way to lighten up your pumpkin is by sculpting it. Sculpting your pumpkin instead of carving it allows light to pass through your jack-o-lantern in different intensities. It also lets you get more detailed with your design because instead of cutting all the way through, you just scratch the surface of the rind. When you sculpt, you simply take a portion of the surface of the skin off. Some of the most elaborate jack-o-lanterns are created by sculpting a pumpkin instead of carving it. Sculptors take a pattern, which can be made or bought in any craft store, and scrape the design into the rind.

To get started, you need to cut a top in the pumpkin in order to remove the seeds and goop. Next, scrape the inside of the rind, making the shell about an inch thick. Make sure the pumpkin is dry and tape the paper pattern onto the pumpkin. Trace the pattern on the pumpkin by pressing really hard with a pen or poker, leaving the image indented into the skin. Once you are done, remove the pattern and scrape the indented pattern into the rind.

If carving or sculpting isn't your thing, don't sweat it. Halloween can be just as festive with a painted pumpkin. Painting allows you to add color and detail to your jack-o-lantern and is a great alternative if you have younger children in the family who can't use carving tools. However, keep in mind that if your pumpkin is outside, it will have to weather wind and rain. In order to preserve your work for as long as possible, apply a paint sealer on the surface of the pumpkin before painting. This will also stop the paint from chipping. For additional fun, try experimenting with glow-in-the-dark paint to get a spooky nighttime effect.

Whether carving, sculpting or painting your pumpkin, it's always fun to add on additional decorations. Using toothpicks, you can poke any number of things into your pumpkin. Try adding on a carrot nose or gumdrop eyes. You can even poke a few dozen lollipops into the top of the jack-o-lantern to give it hair. Kids can take their treat right out of the pumpkin!

However you decide to decorate your pumpkin this year, here are a few more basic things to keep in mind.

1. When cutting the lid of your pumpkin, cut at an inward angle to prevent the lid from falling inside.
2. Using a water-based marker, draw your face or design on the pumpkin before carving.
3. Never use the whole blade of the knife when carving. Try to use short, saw strokes for better control.
4. For any design, start big and then get small. Always do the bigger features first, then concentrate on the details.
5. Don't get scoop happy! If you hollow out too much of your pumpkin, it may rot quicker. Leave a thicker base for a longer lasting pumpkin.
6. Don't worry about making a mistake! If you accidentally cut out part of your pumpkin, simply reattach it by inserting a toothpick to put it back where it belongs.
7. Don't throw out those little glass jars that cracker spread comes in, they're great candle holders! Just soak the labels off and drip a candle in. Their added height makes the candle more resistant to wind.

Remember, a pumpkin is just a pumpkin. Anything goes! Don't be afraid to mess it up. Break from convention, try something new this year and let your creative side loose.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

Here it is almost time to turn the clock back. How time flies when you're having fun! The shops are starting to gear up for the holidays and the sales should be plentiful! Let's do some fall shopping!

Starting out this week in Hampton Bays, I stopped at Val's Closet on Main Street to find a big sale in progress on her designer dresses and accessories. This shop has what it takes to get an entire outfit for any special occasion and look like a million. Stop in and check it out.

Erika's on Ponquogue Avenue in Hampton Bays is showing off their new inventory and is fully stocked with brand new fall 2004 fashions. There are unique quality items here at affordable prices, including outfits and accessories for any and every occasion.

In Southampton at Sunrise to Sunset on Hill Street, look for their "Fall Sale," with 15% off men's, ladies', girls' and boys' fall clothing. There are jackets, pants, knits, and wovens by Quicksilver, Billabong, Hurley, and Roxy, Split, and Ezekiel to name a few. For resort-wear, check out their summer clothing and beach accessories and sandals that are available year round.

For a fall home "Harvest of Savings" sale check out B&N Furniture & Sleep Shop, located on County Road 39A, Southampton for sales on mattress and box spring sets and all bedroom furniture (10% to 30% off), all recliners and chairs (20% to 30% off), all sleepers and sofas (15% to 40% off), all occasional furniture (20% to 50% off) and all pictures and lamps (35% off).

Agway Country Gardens At Bridgehampton on Snake Hollow Road is having their "Seasonal Savings" sale on fall cleanups and more. Make your cleanup easier; look for good savings on rakes, spreaders, lawn carts, bird feeders, birdseed, cat litter, pet food, and so much more.

At English Country Antiques & Home Furnishings in Southampton, Bridgehampton and East Hampton look for a "Fall Upholstery Sale" with 15% off on special offers. Also check out the "Fall Lighting Sale" for indoor and outdoor lighting at a cool 20% off and 25% off pine furniture. There is quite a selection to choose from here, so get going while the sale is still on.

If you want a special gift for your "Dan Fans," there are two new audio CDs by Dan Rattiner with some of his best-known stories, told by the Dan, with sound effects included. "Dan's Greatest Hits" and "Dan's Fables" are available at several locations including Dan's Papers at 2221 Montauk in Bridgehampton, at $9.95 each. Call 631-537-0500 for locations in the Hamptons. The CDs can also be purchased online at: www.danrattiner.com A great stocking stuffer for sure.

Spielberg Nursery & Gift Shop on Montauk

Highway, East Hampton is getting ready and making room for the holidays. The gift shop and nursery is offering a "Fall Clearance" sale with 10% to 50% off all trees, shrubs, perennials, furniture, pottery and gifts. I love the gift shop here; it is filled to the rafters with some unusual merchandise that is just perfect for the gift-giving season. Stop in and check it out; you will be happy you did.

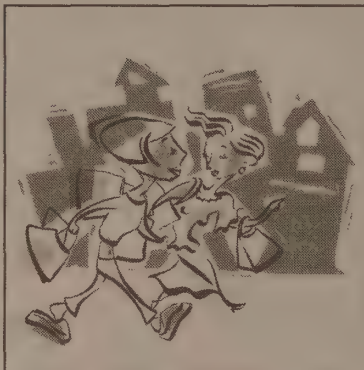

If you're getting that costume ready for Halloween, check out Ricky's East Hampton on Main Street for a tremendous selection of costumes. You will be surprised at what is available here. This is a fun store with lots of unique merchandise. Log onto the website at www.Rickys-NYC.com and see for yourself.

At East Hampton Pharmacy on North Main Street in East Hampton, there is a "Happy Fall" selection on cards and gifts, fragrances, chocolates and penny candy, bath and body care products, along with surgical supplies, vitamins, and your everyday pharmacy needs. Stop in; you will be surprised at what is lurking on the shelves.

In Montauk, stop in at the Montauk Clothing Co. on Main Street for their famous logo sweatshirt in ten comfy colors, and they are on sale for two for $35. This store offers the hard to find larger sizes such as 2X and 3X. Just in time for the cold winter days, these sweats come in handy.

Until next week. Ciao and happy fall shopping.

If you are having a sale, know of one or have any shopping questions, please contact me at Dan's Papers via fax: 631-537-3330 or via email at: shoptil@danspapers.com I would love to hear from you.

Laura Branigan's Estate Auction

Laura Branigan was born July 3, 1957 in Brewster, N.Y. and grew up in Armonk, N.Y., outside New York City. After attending The Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York City in the late 70s, she performed as a back-up singer for Leonard Cohen, and toured with him throughout Europe. When she returned, she was determined to have her own solo career. Her talent, four-octave vocal range and unique style caught the attention of Atlantic Records, who signed a recording contract with her, setting the stage for her meteoric rise to stardom. In 1982, the release of the single "Gloria" thrust Branigan into the popular consciousness, rising to the top of the Billboard Charts and staying there for an unbelievable 36 weeks. She received the Grammy nomination for best Pop Female Vocalist for "Gloria" and it became her signature song. Laura's stature as a major vocalist was secured with two additional top ten releases: "Solitaire" and "How Am I Supposed To Live Without You". Ms. Branigan's career continued to skyrocket in 1983 with the Grammy-nominated song "Imagination" from the movie Flashdance and her unforgettable performance of "The Lucky One" for which she received the Grand Prize at the 13th Tokyo Music Festival. In 1984, the title track of her album "Self Control" rose to Number 2 position of the Top Ten Charts. Her popularity continued through the 80's and 90's with additional hits such as "Spanish Eddie" and "The Power Of Love", soundtrack performances for the films Ghostbusters, Body Rock, Coming To America, and Salsa, and the albums Laura Branigan, Over My Heart, The Best Of Branigan, and Back In Control.

In addition to her stellar recording career, Branigan performed as an actor in the television show Chips, the films Mugsy's Girls and Backstage, and on stage in the New York musical Love, Janis.

Out of the spotlight, Branigan was a fine chef and had an extensive cookbook library. She loved creating her own recipes and was putting the finishing touches on a cookbook of her own this year. Sadly, that project as well as a much-anticipated new album release were halted by her untimely death on August 26 of a brain aneurysm.

This great talent and wonderful human being will be missed by her fans, friends, and family but through her music she will be forever with us all.

OPM Auctions is privileged to offer the Estate of Laura Branigan for sale

Among the items available:

- Ms. Branigan's costumes and clothing
- Gold Records
- Early Unpublished Cassette Tapes
- Hand written music and scores
- Her Guitar

Away At School... By DAVID LION RATTINER

Decisions

A lot of life is all about making decisions about things. Many of these decisions are small in the grand scheme of things, but to each of us they feel like they are the biggest deals in the world. Take my girlfriend, for instance. Yesterday she spent nearly an hour in a jacket store trying to decide whether she should buy a pink or blue winter jacket. It was ridiculous. Her head looked stressed out, she kept asking what I thought, she would try one on, she would try another on, she would talk to the saleslady. Blue or pink was an hour of intense thought. I found myself even caught up in this decision making process.

I tried to think to myself, what would change if she bought a pink coat? A pink coat, I thought, might make her more feminine, it might draw more attention to her from other males, threatening my whole existence with her. She might turn into this materialistic, makeup obsessed human being, wanting everything handed to her on a silver platter. She might make me buy her ridiculous gifts (like the very jacket itself!) all because of the color pink.

On the other hand, she could go blue and everything would be fine, except for the fact that she has turned into a total tomboy. Going to the gym and getting huge man-ish muscles threatening to beat me up at any moment. This could be bad. All this could happen, just from making this decision of color, blue or pink.

In this world, you've got to start thinking ahead.

They teach you that from day one. "Listen kid, you really need to plan ahead for when we get in the car, I can't take a pit stop an hour into the drive."

I remember my Dad teaching me this lesson at an early age and I always make sure my bladder is empty before I hit the road. Think ahead. It's what everything seems to be all about. You make decisions now in order to protect the future ahead. There is a lot more than meets the eye when it comes to teaching your kids to use the bathroom before they get in the car. I am living proof of this.

I made the decision not to purchase an Apple iPod yesterday but I can tell you I thought about it for a long time. I spent the hour and a half thinking about it and didn't buy it. I figured I would save my money and stick with a CD player for now. Wait a little while for the price to drop, as it always does on overpriced crap.

I started thinking when I left the store about what a jerk I am. Here I am, one of the luckiest people on the planet, getting angry about the price of an iPod. I mean, I am lucky just to be human and to be able to think about stuff in the first place. I am even more lucky to be living in a time where iPods are available and am even more lucky to be able to have the chance to attend a good University. I started thinking about how awful some things are. The war in Iraq popped into my head. Christopher Reeve popped into my head. I was so sad when he died. I started thinking about how amazing he is and how awful it must have been for him to be paralyzed. It is amazing what this guy did and how he handled the whole thing. I started to think about a friend of mine, also stuck in a wheelchair, yet he gets some of the best grades at the Northeastern business school and laughs at jokes and enjoys life as much as he can. I then started to realize that very little matters.

There are only so many things that matter in life to me and I forget this a lot of the time when I can't decide on paper or plastic in a grocery store. The first thing that matters the most is that the Yankees continue to beat the Red Sox. Okay, I'm kidding. One of things that matters most I think is being able to chill out about things and just try really hard at things. Whether they work out or not is up to the Universe. So whatever. My girlfriend got the pink coat and I'm realizing that pink or blue does not matter.

I borrowed an iPod today and am listening to Aerosmith. "Life's a journey, not a destination," is a lyric they just sang and it makes a lot of sense. You just got to learn how to enjoy the journey I think, even if it means having to use the bathroom before you get in the car and even if it means that an hour into the drive, you got to make a pit stop.

When In Manhattan... BY OLIVER PETERSON

Words for a Change

As a writer, I've spent a fair amount of time looking for literary events for this column that don't offend me with pretentiousness or nauseate me with their massive impersonal scale. Despite my efforts, it was through a couple of friends that this week's event appeared on my desk. Pianos and "Concerts for Change" will present six popular authors and a celebrity for a night of fun and illumination to benefit the campaign to defeat President Bush in November.

Yeah, last week I chose to write apolitical, but if The New York Times is allowed to endorse Kerry as they did last Sunday, I can too. Hate mail? Bring it on. Regardless of your opinion, this group of writers at Pianos on Saturday is something you should not miss. Six Feet Under's murdered resident granola, Lili Taylor, will appear with writers Jonathan Ames - Wake Up, Sir! Nick Flynn - Another Bullshit Night in Suck City, new East End resident James Frey - A Million Little Pieces, Darin Straus - Chang And Eng, Nelly Reifler - See Through, and Stephen Elliott - Looking Forward To It or How I Learned To Stop Worrying And Love The American Political Process. Some authors are regulars on the reading circuit, while others are more rare to see.

Jonathan Ames is an experienced performer. He has authored several humorous and kinky books of fiction and nonfiction, boxed as an amateur, and written as a sex columnist for the New York Press. He is sure to provide a few belly laughs. Nick Flynn's new memoir about meeting his long lost father as a bum while working at a homeless shelter has been getting rave reviews. Michael Cunningham called it "Devastating" and ranked the book alongside Frank Conroy's Stop Time.

Our local boy, and my friend, James Frey debuted his memoir, A Million Little Pieces with a PR storm. The book lived up to expectation as a tight story about battling addiction without the druggie glamour usually associated with the subject matter. It hit, and we are lucky to have him join the ranks of authors in the Hamptons. He's not a big readings guy, and expressed that the cause is well worth his rare appearance at this event. Take this chance to be personally introduced to a great tome that has been touted as "the War and Peace of addiction books." He's currently working on a new television show and the movie version of his memoir will begin shooting next year.

Darin Straus is a first-time novelist who has based his work on a true story. Chang and Eng is based on the life of the famous conjoined twins. After three years of intensive research, Straus imagined the lives of the twins in vivid detail through the voice of Eng on his deathbed. Sadly, it was later discovered that the two could have been separated with a simple cut of flesh that held no vital veins or organs. With the lack of technology at that time, no one knew. Publisher's Weekly calls Nancy Reifler a "writer to watch." Her first book of fourteen short stories approaches the subjects of expectation and reality through offbeat characters. She's a new writer worth examination.

Stephan Elliott is the organizer of the event. The author has been running a blog on his website www.stephanelliott.com that is informative and funny, if only because of the grim truth about our country's current state. He tackles even the most extreme of conspiracy theories a la David Icke and the reptilian agenda. It makes sense that he is the organizer with Concerts for Change, as he is by far the most politically vocal of the evening's talent. Concerts for Change is dedicated to electing John Kerry for president in 2004 by allocating money to pivotal swing states for this all-too-close election. They have produced concerts with the likes of Jack Black, Celebrity Poker champ and comedian David Cross, Moby, and local, Susanne Vega. Go because you love America, go because you love good writing, or go because you want to have a laugh.

Pianos is a fine bar located at 158 Ludlow at Stanton Street, on the Lower East Side of Manhattan. Donations will be accepted at the door. Hopes are that you can fork over at least $10. Give more if you can, give less if you absolutely can't, but go. Call (212) 505-3733 for more info.

Get the rub

Fall has well and truly landed as quickly as the beautiful red, orange, brown and burnished leaves that also seem to be "fall-ing" out of nowhere upon our heads. Wasn't it just yesterday we were swimming in the sea and barbecuing up a storm? (Yikes, nobody mention storms.) It seems mere moments ago that we were tanning to achieve the perfect shade of bronze and flip flops were our only mode of transport...but now all that's gone, hasn't it... Well, hasn't it? Not so fast, people, there are, in fact, still remnants of summer left hanging around, lurking listlessly while fall tries to sweep in a new, if not a little cold, breath of fresh air. It's because of these lackluster left-overs that, quite frankly, of late, you've been looking duller than dull. Summer is not as far away as you think it is, it's written all over your face and body. You're still sporting the after effects of sun, sea and sand, and it shows. But do yourself a favor - it's time to let it go. No offense, but you just don't have the same glow you had a couple of months ago. So turn over a new leaf. Shed a little skin.

We all know that the summer months are hard on the biggest organ we have - our skin. But the answer is to get rid of that damaged dermis that's good for nothing après sea and sand. Yes, I'm talking to you... and you.

So what to do? How can we look spring fresh for the winter ahead? Simple. Exfoliate, exfoliate, exfoliate.

Yeah, yeah, we've heard it all before...exfoliate. But what is exfoliating, how does it work and why bother to strip away layers of dead skin on our face and bodies - What's the rub? Why, to reveal refreshed, more beautiful glowing skin beneath, of course. Think about it, what's good enough for nature, is good enough for us. Like bountiful stunning oaks and apple trees, shed some skin this fall. I promise you'll feel like a new you. And no, this process won't diminish the last of your tan - you new cells, which move up and through the epidermis to rest on the surface of the skin. As newer cells continue to move up, older cells near the top die and rise to the surface of your skin, too. Eventually these cells harden, a process known as cornification, and this layer of skin acts as a barrier and protective layer to keep moisture and goodness in and keep toxins out. As new cells cornify and move to the top of the skin, older cornified layers usually shed, or naturally exfoliate. This happens when we wash, dress, move, shower, etc. If you're under thirty, you can rest assured that your skin will naturally exfoliate every 25 days on its own. However, after age 30, this process slows down drastically. But with the damaging effects of severe elemental weather, like summer's abrasive sun, or the winter to come, your skin becomes even more dry and damaged and in need of exfoliation, no matter what age you are. So it's always a good idea to give a helping hand and keep our skin looking and feeling bright, gleaming and clean. After summer, we have plenty of dead, flaky skin that needs to be sloughed off. It's the excess cornified cells that remain on the surface that make skin look dull, listless and flaky and this is when we need to exfoliate, to reveal new, refreshed cells beneath. Gentle exfoliation is excel-know, that hint of color you've been desperate to maintain - it may even make the color you still have glow more brilliantly.

Here's how it works: Our outer skin, known as the epidermis, constantly goes through a process of reproduction. Cells at the bottom of the epidermis, close to the dermis underneath, continually produce lent, and well worth the effort, but one must be careful not to remove too many layers, don't be over zealous when rubbing with harsh products that, with over use, can be too abrasive and leave our skin raw, sore and more susceptible to the harmful outside influences like wind, rain and rays.

Many people these days are turning to the new trends like microdermabrasion for exfoliation, but there are other ways to exfoliate both face and body. Here are some great products and alternatives to try at home.

There are three main alternatives:

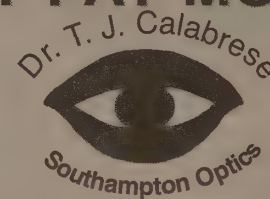

- 1) Use a tool: A flannel, loofa, rough towels, etc.
- 2) Try chemical treatments found over the counter containing glycolic acid or other AHAs
- 3) Use products that contain slightly abrasive textures to exfoliate, like scrubs and rubs.

Here are some good products I suggest you check out for glowing skin this fall:

- St. Ives Apricot Scrub $2.99 found at any drug store.
- Origins Salt Rub Smoothing Body Scrub $30
- Origins Ginger Body Scrub $30
- Philosophy Heaven On Earth $22
- Clarins, One-Step Gentle Exfoliating Cleanser $29
- Our homemade recipe: Take a packet of sugar (raw sugar works the best), add a couple drops of olive oil to create a spreading condition, then gently rub it into your face.

Take care of the skin you're in, exfoliate, but be careful not to rub it too thin!

Ponchos Are Back

In the world of fashion, what's old will eventually become new again. Originally worn by the Aztecs and Incan Indians, ponchos have been carried through generations. Trends from the past always seem to transcend into the present and future. This year, ponchos have reappeared, making a bold new statement.

Yes, those hand-knit creations of love that grandma made you in the 70s are back in style. I recall having several in different shades of orange, green and brown. Whether you own a vintage poncho or you're searching for a new one, they are definitely a fun addition to your wardrobe.

Today there are an array of styles, knits and fabrics to choose from. They've become more than a simple cape depending on the pattern or quality of the fabric. This versatility allows you to dress up or dress down any outfit.

Ponchos and knit capes are usually made one-size-fits-all, but each design will fit everyone differently. It appears that they're mostly worn by women, but back in the day, Clint Eastwood sported a flashy poncho in a few westerns. I declare that men can wear ponchos as well!

There are many resources available such as Saks Fifth Avenue in Southampton (or online), the Gap, Banana Republic as well as other online and catalogue bargains, like Victoria's Secret. Jennifer Aniston, Drew Barrymore, Jessica Simpson and many other celebs have jumped on this trendy reinvention poncho bandwagon.

Thin, lightweight ponchos can be worn with jeans as an accessory and formal delicate ponchos can be worn out on the town. I've seen ponchos made from various fabrics such as leather or fur.

Over the weekend I stopped in several local stores to check out their version of the poncho and or cape and I found many beautiful selections to choose from. At Calypso (Southampton and East Hampton) you will find a rainbow of high-end soft-knit ponchos offered in an assortment of colors (prices vary). Renaissance in Southampton has several types of ponchos by Laurie B. with and without fringe (prices range $68-$98). Brooklyn Knits (Southampton) specializes in high-quality designed ponchos (prices vary, but average at about $200 or so). At Banana Republic there are many offerings including a wool/angora cable knit poncho offered in Mallorca pink, porcelain and black. This elegant poncho is made of 50% wool and 50% angora, V-neck with a fringe hem is priced at $98. Saks Fifth Avenue offers an array of ponchos and capes (see www.saksfifthavenue.com), but a few standouts include a multi-colored cashmere turtleneck-style with a fringe hem for $193.90 (was $278). They also have a suede poncho designed by UGG - get the matching UGG boots and you're all set.

Ponchos are available in a variety of neck-lines such as V-neck, Scoop-neck and Turtlenecks. Some ponchos are made of angora, chenille, wool, and may incorporate floral designs and other patterns. Whether you wear a poncho for warmth or just want to add a fashion accessory to your wardrobe, the selections for the 2004 season appear to be endless.

Ponchos are a must have on your fall shopping list. Check out local stores and shop online. Try a few different styles and necklines on before making that final decision. Not every style is meant for every body type. Taller and slimmer women may find that they can wear a longer version while more petite women may prefer a shorter length. A good quality poncho will be worth the investment. Just remember, they will be in and out of style for years to come.

HEALTH, BEAUTY & FITNESS

A Yogi's Attire

One of the most important things you have to gain from a yoga practice is the awakening of the senses. At the end of an intensive session, you make your way to the floor to, eventually, fall into final relaxation. Your mind drains of all outside thoughts, and your focus turns to whatever you sense in that very moment. It is because of this presence in the moment that yoga clothing is so fantastically comfortable. My whole wardrobe has made the metamorphosis into a yogi's attire. Yoga practice is a spiritual journey as well as a physical one, and therefore it cannot be bought with the right clothes or accessories. But it doesn't hurt to be draped in fabrics that feel like a soft feather caressing your skin. When you bring your awareness to how your physical body feels, it's nice to be able to take a deep breath and think, "softness, lightness..."

While long, soft cotton pants with a drawstring around a thick waistband may imply sweatpants, there is something far superior about yoga pants. They hug the body in a flattering way. They're so comfortable you feel like you are pulling on a pair of clouds and a soft cloud t-shirt in the morning. You won't want to take them off to go to sleep at night. And yoga clothes are not just for yoga. Yesterday, I was dressed in clothes purely from Mandala Yoga and Dance Studio in Amagansett. A Woo tank top in a vibrant turquoise fits perfectly under a wide-necked long sleeve Woo ribbed shirt in a golf-course green. Your classic grey sweatpants from Velvet are stretchy enough that they bend every which way a yogi's body wants to contort, but they're loose-fitting enough that the cuffs slide over a pair of warm boots.

Another philosophy of yoga is consciousness. The clothes made for yoga epitomize this mentality, because there is such attention to detail, from the stitching around the pockets to the om sign on the hip. Some great brands of yoga clothes, that go far beyond yoga application, are Woo, Hardtail, Blue Tattoo, Yogi, and Velvet. Among the clothing these brands manufacture are yoga pants, cropped yoga pants, muscle cowls, tank tops, yoga shorts, skirts, dresses, tube tops, sarongs, sweatshirts, and ponchos.

During a yoga practice, you want to be dressed in comfortable clothes that allow you to move and stretch, while allowing your body to breathe. After all, the fundamental emphasis in yoga is on the breath. Your body will heat up through your exertion. I usually dress in layers for a yoga practice. Cropped foldover Woo yoga pants, a tank with a built in bra, and a long-sleeve shirt of a soft cotton material cover me when I stand barefoot at the front of my yoga mat, preparing for my first sun salute. Inhale the arms up, exhale and bend over straight legs. Inhale, step the left foot back, exhale the right back to meet it. Inhale. Exhale, lower down onto the mat, inhale push the body up into upward dog, the tops of the feet and the palms of the hands the only parts of the body touching the floor. Exhale into downward dog, the flats of the feet on the ground and the body in an A shape. Inhale, exhale. Inhale hop the feet forward, exhale. Inhale the arms up to the sky, exhale the hands back into prayer position. After one sun salute, I usually shed the first layer of clothing, and it isn't until the body is draining of all its energy in final relaxation that I start covering up again.

Jolie Parcher, owner and director of Mandala Yoga and Dance Studio in Amagansett, added to her business by opening the India Chic Boutique. She sells yoga clothes as well as high end fashion inspired by the yoga style. Comfort and flattering fits are what make these clothes so special. Jolie is actually working right now on beginning her own line of clothing, called the Mandala line. This new label is available at the India Chic Boutique in Amagansett Square, and eventually she hopes to introduce her name to yoga studios around the country. Yoga clothing allows for the freedom and comfort that yoga itself inspires. There are no restrictions, no boundaries. We've come a long way since spandex and leg-warmers. My only problem with yoga clothes is I never want to take them off; I'd rather remain cloaked in softness.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Last Chores of Fall

Autumn is a magical time. Trees change to shades of sienna, orange, red, and yellow; the air seems refreshed after summer; changes in light and shadow evoke the spookiness of Halloween! At the same time, one observes little beasties scurrying to store nuts and food bits for the onslaught of winter! But fall can also be depressing. Personally, I begin to dread the thoughts of snow and ice and cold!

For gardeners, autumn is a time of last-minute preparations for winter and planting for spring. Because it signals the end of the growing season, it is sometimes tough to get motivated to do all that work. At this time, I remember my mother's story of Adam and Eve. The story set forth in my mind that Adam and Eve were the first gardeners, and that man's responsibility is to tend to nature. It sometimes helps muster that last boost of energy I need to finish garden chores.

The enduring qualities of a garden are evident in fall and winter. So now is a good time to take stock of a garden's design. Make notes about things that seem out of place or do not meet your aesthetic. It is too late to move trees and shrubs, so save the notes until spring and adjust the landscape accordingly.

While you do not want to do much planting now, except for some last-minute bulbs, the following tips can help your garden survive unscathed through winter.

As the first frosts come on, annuals will die. I hate dealing with the mess of mushy impatiens and other decaying annuals. So, I spend an hour or so each week to remove annuals in preparation for winter. Wherever these plants have grown, I sprinkle some compost, cow manure, and lime.

Concerning perennials, let the foliage stand until there are a few hard freezes. Some gardeners prefer to leave dead foliage until spring. However, there is a benefit to getting rid of it, especially if your garden was troubled by fungus (as so many on the East End). When there is no green left under the bark when you scratch it, cut perennials back to about three inches above ground. Of course, never cut back hydrangeas which bloom on the previous year's growth – unless you just like the foliage!

While perennials can be divided through mid-September (including hostas, daylilies, peonies, and rudebeckia) it is too late for them to set roots before winter. Let perennials sit now until spring. Add a layer of cow manure or compost at this time of year, and mulch well.

Roses require special care in late fall. By now, all fertilizing should have ended. Continuing to fertilize this late promotes additional, new growth that is likely to be killed by winter. Instead, once the foliage drops, prune back rose canes to prevent damage from winter winds and spray with a copper fungicide. Cover roses with about eight inches of loose, well-drained soil, and further cover with mulch or compost.

Fall and winter are great times to compost garden debris and leaves. One easy way to compost is to buy some bales of straw and use these to form a rectangle with a well in the center. The well is a great place to compost garden clippings and leaves. As you fill the well, add in some organic fertilizer to aid in decomposition. Be sure to chop leaves well before adding, as this speeds decomposition. The addition of fertilizer helps bacteria do their work.

One note on leaves: I am told that ticks climb oak trees and lay their eggs on the undersides of leaves. Once the leaves fall, the eggs over-winter and hatch in spring. Clearing leaves away eradicates the eggs and removes the likelihood of tick larvae emerging in the spring. Using this approach, I have had no ticks for many years!

Now is also a good time to do last minute work such as edging flower beds and performing garden construction. The soil is still workable and the weather conducive to laborious activities.

Thinking ahead and finishing garden tasks now, before winter sets in, will make the garden look aesthetically pleasing and secure it for winter. It will also enable you to use the short window of spring to plant and divide plants because you were diligent in fall.

Turning Trash Into Treasure

Many years ago, my dad came home holding an old, battered guitar in his hands. He smiled as he handed it to me, explaining that one of his coworkers had thrown it into the dumpster in the rear of the factory where they worked, happy to be rid of it. I looked at the thing with dismay, unimpressed by the large crack in the back of the body and the overall poor appearance of the instrument. I had just begun taking guitar lessons and what I really wanted was a Gibson guitar like the one my guitar heroes were playing at the time. "Just put some glue over the crack and clean it up a bit and you'll be all set," my dad said cheerfully. I thanked him, and struggled to play it off and on for about a year until it was finally relegated to the basement closet where it would remain for the next 20 years, unused and unloved.

After my parents died and the house was sold, I came across the old guitar once again, buried under tons of accumulated junk. It was still in pretty much the same awful condition, but I decided that, before throwing it away, I would put some strings on it and actually play the thing simply for curiosity's sake. To my utter amazement, the guitar sounded better than some of my high-priced acoustic versions and the playing action was quite good too. Realizing that this jewel in the rough might make a potentially superb instrument either for myself to play or to sell to a collector, I set out to repair and refurbish my little prize.

The instrument in question was an old (late 1960s) Harmony arch-top acoustic with a carved spruce top and a realistic 1950s jazz guitar look. For you guitar aficionados out there, this instrument was the lower-priced version of the Gibson L-4C and similar in design. The peg head had a fleur-de-lis mother-of-pearl inlay set in a Brazilian rosewood veneer and segmented three-piece f-holes. Its 16-inch body provided a very well-balanced sound with good mid-range, treble, and bass.

The first thing I did was to have the crack on the rear of the body professionally repaired at a local music store. Once that was done, I stripped the guitar of all its hardware – tuning heads, bridge, tailpiece, and strings. The body itself was in good shape with only a minimum of superficial scratches. A few coats of quality guitar polish easily took care of that problem. I then glued a broken piece of the otherwise intact fleur-de-lis back in place on the peg head and used a toothbrush to clear away the dirt that had formed in the crevices.

I then turned my attention to the fret board. Using some 0000 steel wool and some linseed oil (the pale boiled is the best), I wet the steel wool with the oil and proceeded to clean and polish the frets. It was amazing to find that once the fret board had been cleaned and polished, the sound from the guitar became even more vibrant and was much easier to play. The bridge, tailpiece, and tuning heads were treated with a mild detergent to remove grime and then put back in place. I strung the guitar with medium bronze strings so that they would produce a good, acoustic sound, and the instrument was now ready to play.

And play it I did. In fact, it soon became the favorite of all my guitars. Not only did I find myself eager to play it frequently, I actually used it on stage during my performances and even employed it in the recording studio, where its clear, bell-like resonance added enormously to the overall atmosphere of the tracks.

Since the time I began using my newly refurbished guitar, I have had several people offer to buy it from me. The most I could ever hope to fetch for such an instrument would be about $400, and one guy even offered me a bit more. No, it's not a Gibson or a Martin, but I could never part with it nor love any guitar more. What was once an unattractive, unplayable instrument became, with a little love and care, something beautiful and elegant. Whoever thought that the unwanted guitar my dad rescued from the dumpster so long ago would one day become my most beloved and prized possession: junk turned into treasure.

For those of you looking to turn junk into treasure, it's good to know where to look. Dumpsters and garbage cans are one place to begin. Other sources are attics, yard sales, and junk yards, any of which may contain an array of items just waiting for an extreme makeover. There are many books on the market that explain how to repair and beautify almost anything, and the Internet is another valuable resource to aid you in any restoration project.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

In Manhattan, prices are through the roof, where Martin Zweig, New York author and financial mogul has put his sprawling penthouse on the market for a record-breaking $70 million. The nine-bedroom penthouse sits on the 41st through 43rd floors of the prestigious Pierre Hotel on 5th Avenue. Its 2800 sq ft includes 6 fireplaces, 4 terraces, 6 full baths & 2 halves. The marble floors are heated and the grand salon was once one of the hotel ballrooms. Zweig bought the property in 1999 for $21.5 million from Australian publishing heiress Lady Mary Fairfax, who spent millions renovating it in the late 80s. Its price now tops that of the 20,000 sq ft condo that was put on the market in 2000 for $62 million by Elizabeth Johnson of Johnson & Johnson. Currently, the highest priced sale in New York City has been $42.5 million for a 12,500 sq ft duplex in the Time Warner Center.

Maycroft closes:

After months on the market and tireless efforts made by the local government to purchase the historic Maycroft Estate in North Haven, it has finally closed, selling to a private party for $20 million last week. The town was trying work a deal right down to the wire in a last ditch effort to purchase the property for preservation. The new owner is said to have plans to restore the old mansion to its original state. The 118-year-old estate on 43.5 acres was designed by Edward Delano Lindsey as an example of the typical summer cottage at the turn of the century. Maycroft was added to the New York State Register of Historic Places in 1994. The main house functioned as a day school until this past June.

In Riverhead Town, the old Suffolk Theatre may be renovated by a Long Island based renovation and construction company that hopes to purchase the property and transform it into a performing arts center. The plan is to keep with the original look of the 74-year-old theatre and have it remain a single screen. There has been an offer of $700,000, and the proposed cost to renovate the old building is approximately $2 million.

On the ocean in Sagaponack is a 3000 sq ft converted barn on 2.3 acres. It has 3 bedrooms, 3 baths, a 2 car detached garage and a 60 ft heated pool. It is listed with multiple area brokers at $12,100,000.

Historic homes for sale in Bridgehampton:

This 6300 sq ft Greek revival built in 1840 was completely renovated in 2002. It has 5 bedrooms and 5.5 baths, a formal parlor, a library, and an English conservatory. There are 5 suite style bedrooms that include a master with fireplace and private porch. The gourmet kitchen has 4 refrigerators, one, a wine refrigerator, and 3 sinks. The gated property includes brick and granite terraces, a pool, pool house, and outdoor fireplace. It is listed with Brown Harris Stevens for $4,200,000.

Also, a Greek revival c.1840 on .30 acres with a guest cottage. The main house is 1450 sq ft and contains 3 bedrooms and 2 baths. The guest cottage is 450 sq ft and has a full bath and basement. Listed for $1,695,000 with Brown Harris Stevens.

In Cutchogue, 600 sq ft of Peconic Bay frontage with a floating dock is protected by a unique peninsula. The home has spectacular views and a cabana on the white sand private beach. The 1920s 3 bedroom, 2.5 bath home is set on 3 acres and has a detached 2 car garage, heat radiant tile floors and a stone fireplace. It is listed with the Corcoran Group in Southold for $4,750,000.

IT'S YOUR INVESTMENT - TAKE GOOD CARE!

When you own an investment property, your goal is to get the highest monthly rental with the lowest vacancy rate and to keep quality tenants. How can you pull it all together?

It pays to keep your property in good condition, not only while you are trying to rent it out, but after the tenants move in. You obviously want the property to look its best while it is being shown, but if you work at keeping it in top condition when tenants are living there, they are likely to stay around for a while. When something needs to be repaired, be sure they know whom to call to get the job done. Arrange for periodic inspections of the property to check for leaking roofs or pipes, defective wiring or malfunctioning appliances. If you are an absentee landlord, it makes sense to hire professionals to keep a close eye on your investment for you.

By the way, this is good advice for your home as well! It's real obvious when a home is well cared-for, and it makes a big difference in the ultimate price secured and the length of time it remains on the market.

CAMPUS CHAOS

Dear Dan,

In response to the discussion regarding the negative campaigning currently taking place by Bill Manger's campaign, I would just like to say that Tim Bishop consistently fought for employees at Southampton College and no layoffs occurred during his watch. He cared, but I think was stymied by his bosses, the LIU administration who only built one building, Chancellor's Hall, on campus in the past thirty years. Many more buildings, including a library, new dorms and athletic centers were desperately needed, as were updates to the already existing buildings.

Perhaps most of the so-called deficit under Tim's watch were attributable to approximately $2 Million in administration fees paid per year to LIU for combined services between all LIU campuses, what LIU specifically did with these fees, I do not know.

In regard to the hasty decision by the LIU Board of Trustees to close Southampton while freshman enrollment was up, a new library was being built and a new core curriculum (that faculty members worked so hard on developing) was being executed, I am sure if Tim were still Provost he would have fought this tooth and nail. He was a fighter for the students and the people who worked on our campus, one of the East End's largest employers and as Congressman he is fighting with Save the college at Southampton to ensure that a four-year college stay on campus, benefiting not only employees but also the East End as a whole who cannot afford to lose this educational and cultural resource.

FACT CHECK

Dear Dan,

I enjoy your Dan's Papers and your many stories.

The Surprise story was one of special interest to me. In July 1943, I was at Camp Upton, where I received my very first US Army uniform. We had some free time and explored the camp and found a few buildings left over from WWI, similar to the one you described your Surprise story.

Now I have a surprise for you – Charles Lindbergh did not fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean to Paris in 1928! I have (since the age of three) been a great fan of Lindbergh most of my life. You see, I was born on May 20, 1924 – Lindbergh flew to Paris on May 20, 1927. I was three years old. My birthplace was in Cherryville (not Cherry Hill) New Jersey close to Flemington, New Jersey where Lindbergh's child was kidnapped.

My interest in aviation put me in the US Army Air Force where I went through training and at the end of WWII was a crew member on the B-29 Aircraft assigned to the 21st Bomber Command.

After two and a half years of service I worked in aviation related electronics for over thirty-eight years. Thanks to my interest in Lindbergh.

I am now eighty and retired twenty years ago.

Thanks Dan, but I had to correct that date.

SHINY SHIRLEY

Dear Dan,

Cute article regarding alternative crimes to be explored by Shelter Islanders. Unfortunately number six on her list contained a cruel remark to the residents in the Shirley, Mastics and Moriches communities. Why is Shirley the scapegoat when someone needs a laugh? It's not fair to say unkind things. What did we ever do to her?

As a matter of fact....if anyone has relatives that stay too long, I say "drop them off in Shirley". They'll find nice people; good neighbors, friendly local merchants and the most frequented library in Suffolk County. If that doesn't make them want to stay just show them one of the most beautiful beaches in the world. That'll get 'em.

Police Blotter

Bijoux Be Gone! Even amid the current low-carb craze, some calories – like rock candy – can be hard to resist. According to East Hampton Town Police reports, such an insatiable craving led to the disappearance of a $6,000 diamond wedding ring from a Gilbert's Path home in Amagansett.

Brother Can You "Spare"

The Sign? With the election a mere two weeks away, it appears a few folks are willing to go to illegal lengths to express their opinion as well as deny others the same opportunity. Over on Montauk Highway in Sagaponack someone wrote "Bush Lies" on anti-John Kerry signs, while in Bridgehampton another wayward politico snatched a pair of "John Kerry for President" signs off a Brick Kiln Road property. Not terribly neighborly...

Timber Takin' Twosome. 'Tis the season to snuggle up in front of a roaring fire, which seems to have gotten this pair of wily woodchucks thinking. According to police reports, a resident of Poplar Street returned home after being out for a couple of hours only to discover when he wanted to start a fire...he had nary a stick to rub together. He'd been robbed of nearly $400 worth of firewood. A witness to the timber taking reported seeing two men load up a blue minivan.

Construction Obstruction And We're Not Talking Building Moratorium.

Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's imported bathroom tiles. A soul unfamiliar with this fairly recent commandment absconded with $26,000 worth of terrazzo from a construction site on Lake Road in Bridgehampton. Also nabbed were nine doors valued at $3,825. How did so much in materials disappear? While the case is under investigation with Southampton Town Police, it is believed the thief used a key hidden on the premises to gain entry into the home.

Like Bees to Honey. Another construction caper took place on Noyac Road in Sag Harbor. In this case, thieves helped themselves to over $1,000 in wooden studs from a house under construction. Fancy that...all of this building appears to have given birth to a burgeoning construction underground. Who'd a thought?

Jilted at the Jitney. According to East Hampton Village Police reports, a Geoffrey Beene duffel (may his licensing soul rest in peace) was nabbed from in front of the Hampton Jitney stop on Main Street near the Palm Restaurant. Apparently, the bag contained a Rolex watch, jewelry, an $800 Nikon camera, an extra lens, several rolls of film and other items.

Pool Pandemonium. What Are You Going to Do? A resident on Meadow Street West in Bridgehampton reported that someone took his pool cover, which was worth about $1,200. An odd item to steal, but even odder, the homeowner was able to provide authorities with the name of a suspect.

Guess Borrowing And Returning Was Out Of The Question... Necklaces, a brooch and earrings topping the charts at $22,000 were pinched from a home on Farmview Drive in Sagaponack, sometime between late summer and Columbus Day. The homeowner was able to provide Southampton Police with the name of a possible suspect, so perhaps all is not lost.
